Farewell to Singapore — Reporter's Epic Story of Dying City

By C. YATES McDANIEL

SINGAPORE, Feb. 11—(10:30 a. m.)—(11:30 p. m., Eastern War Time, Tuesday)—(AP)—The sky over Singapore is black with the smoke of a dozen huge fires this morning as I write my last message from this once beautiful, prosperous and peaceful city.

The roar and crash of cannonade and bursting bombs which are shaking my typewriter and my hands, which are wet with nervous perspiration, tell me without need of an official communique that the war which started nine weeks ago 400 miles away is on the outskirts of this shaken bastion of empire today.

I am sure there is a bright tropic sun shining somewhere overhead, but in my many-windowed room it is too dark to work without electric lights.

Over the low rise where the battle is raging I can see relay after relay of Japanese planes circling, then going into murderous dives on our soldiers who are fighting back in a hell over which there is no protecting screen of our own fighters.

But the Japanese are not completely alone in the skies this morning, for I just saw two "wild beasts"—obsolete bi-planes with an operating speed of about 100 miles an hour—fly low over the Japanese positions and unload bomb burdens with a resounding crash.

British fighter pilots still were taking on the enemy against overwhelming odds.

It makes me ashamed of myself, sitting here with my heart beating faster than their old motors, when I think what chance those lads have of getting back in their antiquated machines.

If ever brave men earned undying glory, those RAF pilots have this tragic morning.

There are many other brave men in Singapore today.

Not far away are anti-aircraft batteries in open spaces—they must be to have a clear field of fire.

Please overlook the break in continuity but a packet of bombs just landed so close I had to duck behind a wall which I hoped would—and did—screen the blast.

But those gun crews keep on fighting, their guns peppering smoke into the limited ceiling every time Japanese planes come near—that, almost constantly.

The all clear has just sounded—what a joke!

From the window I can see three Japanese planes flying low not a mile away.

A few minutes ago I heard a tragic two-way telephone conversation.

Eric Davis, director of the Malayan Broadcasting corporation, urged Governor Sir Shenton Thomas for permission to destroy the outlying broadcasting station. The governor demurred, saying the situation was not too bad, and refused to issue a direct order.

Davis telephoned the station in question, instructing the staff to keep on the air but to stand by for urgent orders.

We tuned in on its wavelength. In the middle of a broadcast in Malayan, urging the people of Singapore to stand firm, the station went dead.

I am leaving now in a car which I swear I will put into forward gear and head straight into the Straits of Malacca.

I left one car for the Japanese in Nanking in 1937 but never again.

Don't expect to hear from me for many days but, please inform Mrs. McDaniel, Hotel Preanger, Bandoeng, Java, that I have left this land of the living and the dying.

At my elbow while I write this last dispatch is Captain O. K. Fearon, the minister of information adviser on censorship, who is breakfasting on biscuits and brandy:

Henry Steel, army public relations officer, who has seen us through a bad situation from the Thailand border to Singapore, has just told me I have ten minutes to pack up and leave.

When Henry says "go," I go.

So good-bye to Singapore.

ANTI-WEEKLEY FORCES RALLY

Decide To Press For Hearing of 'Misconduct' Charges In Butler School Scrap.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Charging that the Butler school board had been "intimidated" Monday by 200 Butler school district residents who demanded that School Superintendent Willard S Weekley be restored to his position, another group of Butlerites—150 strong—gathered last night to press for full hearing of the "misconduct" charges against the superintendent.

The meeting, which lasted until long after midnight, followed a day of quiet at the school after pupil demonstrations on Friday and Monday protested the school board's suspension of Weekley.

Sheriff's deputies were called to Butler for the second time this morning by a caller who informed them of possible violence in the village. Deputies responded to a similar call last night, but both times reported "everything quiet."

The group last night described

OFF FOR CAMP

Second Largest Contingent of Soldiers Leaves County.

Richland county's largest contingent of soldiers since the United States entered the war more than two months ago left Mansfield at 8 a. m., today for the Fort Hayes induction station at Columbus.

While censorship restrictions prohibit publication of the number of men inducted, county draft board clerks said it was the second largest group to leave the county. More than 120 men were inducted in a group last winter.

The boards will send a large number of prospective selectees to Fort Hayes in about two weeks for their final physical examinations.

Under the new two-examination plan, registrants are checked first at the Mansfield armory for obvious physical defects and then must pass a rigid examination at Columbus before they are inducted.

Farmer, Ex-OSR Guard, Tells Why He Shot Parolee Working for Him

By ALVIN L. KRIEG

"I felt that it was my responsibility to keep him from going 'over the hill.'"

This, in short, was the version given by Willis Harris, 46-year-old farmer, of the shooting that took place Monday afternoon in the room where he lies almost motionless because his back is broken.

Harris, from his bed, fired the bullet that struck James Wilson, 30-year-old parolee from Mansfield State Reformatory, according to Sheriff Frank E. Robinson

Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz said Harris faces a charge of shooting with intent to wound—or a more serious charge if Wilson dies. A bullet passed through Wilson's body, piercing his intestine, and now peritonitis has set in. General hospital attaches give him a 50-50 chance for recovery.

Harris and Wilson are central figures in a real-life drama woven together by a thread of fantastic circumstances. It is the story of two men who went to the same farm from the reformatory—one after 18 years as a guard, the other after serving 13 months of a one-to-20 year term for forgery.

Harris became a guard on April 7, 1923, and retired last Aug. 1 His record at the reformatory was very satisfactory, Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke reported.

For some time the guard had

CLAPS RATION ON RETREADS

Henderson Sets Feb. 19 as Date For Limiting Sale of Recapped Tires.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced today that retreaded and recapped tires will be rationed starting Feb. 19.

Henderson said it was "quite probable" that there will be no crude rubber available for retreading tires outside of those for a small number of vehicles already eligible to obtain new tires and tubes.

Henderson explained that the rationing of retreaded and recapped tires of all grades and types of "camelback"—the rubber compound used to form new treads on worn tires—will be administered by the same setup now rationing new tires and tubes.

The price administrator pointed out that the war production board each month determines the amount, grade and type of "camelback," and a certain portion will be produced each month for retreading or recapping truck tires.

"None will be available this month for the retreading of passenger car tires and, perhaps, none for the month of March," Henderson warned.

Henderson asserted that "events will dictate the future production of this material."

Drive Nets 17,000 Pounds of Scrap Iron In Two Days

Richland county's campaign for scrap iron and metal which opened Monday gained momentum today as 17,000 pounds were reported collected. A section of Central park was fenced off this morning for the convenience of donors desiring to save city and county trucks a special trip to their homes.

Collections in Mansfield have netted about 15,000 pounds alone, according to County Commissioner Charles W. Mitchell, in charge of the collection trucks. About 2,000 pounds have been donated by Weller township.

The house-to-house collection plan has been abandoned in favor of concentrating upon answering calls from persons who notify the American Legion home concerning donations, Mitchell said.

Mrs. Emma Young and Mrs. Edith Metcalf are stationed daily at the Legion from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. to receive these calls.

All funds from the collection of scrap metals will revert to buy articles for the men in service, Mitchell said, adding that a public accounting will be made at the end of the drive.

British Stage Counter Thrust Against Enemy

BULLETIN

CALCUTTA — (UP) — The Singapore radio still was broadcasting at noon today.

(By International News Service)

British defenders of Singapore reorganized their lines and struck with a counter-attack today while the Japs continued feinting thrusts at Australia and lightened their attacks on American troops in the Philippines.

The fact that the British were able to organize a counter-attack was in itself cheering but this unlooked for show of strength relieved in only slight measure the Japanese pressure by air and land which has brought the besieged fortress to its darkest hour.

At the same time, the Japs again stabbed tentatively at defense outposts of Australia. The latest Jap gesture was an air raid on the southeastern tip of New Guinea but there were no details on the damage inflicted.

But eyes of the world were focussed on Singapore.

An official military commentator in London announced that the British had achieved some success in the counter-attack and that the Japs had been rolled back on the northwestern invasion front. He emphasized, however, that the situation still was desperately serious, while asserting with cautious reserve that it had not deteriorated since yesterday when the Jap attack by land and air was intensified.

The Japanese high command continued to claim steady gains for the Nipponese troops and as night fell over the beleaguered island the Japs announced from Tokyo that the vanguard of their forces had entered the Singapore city area. This claim, however, was not borne out from any other source.

As the fight raged, Singapore reported that still more Japanese reinforcement have reached the fighting front in the past few hours. A British radio broadcast described the situation as "very grave." A Japanese communique claimed the invaders stormed and occupied Bukit Timah peak, a 600-foot hill that overlooks Singapore city sprawling five and a half miles to the southeast.

Concern over developments at Singapore was amply manifest at Washington. Military experts in the capital expressed belief the Jap successes in Singapore island

A Far Eastern Dunkirk

NEW YORK—(INS)—A British radio broadcast picked up by CBS and NBC said today that the British and Netherlands navies and mercantile marine are "evacuating women and children from Singapore as fast as they can."

The broadcast said the ships were "rushing in and out of the harbor, ignoring the dangers of almost continual land and air bombardment and the danger from enemy submarines" to carry out this task.

Here's What British Said As Singapore Threat Grew

Here are some of the statements made by British leaders during the course of the relentless drive of the Japanese down the Malayan peninsula.

Dec. 19—Empire authorities said: "Supreme efforts are being made to hold Malaya even at the expense of other fronts to prevent the possibility of a direct Japanese assault on Singapore."

Jan. 18: A "high British authority" predicted the united forces would have air superiority over the Japanese in the Malayan area within three days. (On Feb. 10 Japanese planes bombed Singapore city at their leisure.)

Jan. 27: Prime Minister Winston Churchill pledged to the house of commons in calling for a vote of confidence that the Malayan

CALL MORE MEN

Australians Subordinate Everything To War.

CANBERRA, Australia —(U.P.)— War Minister F. M. Forde, announcing a new mobilization of manpower for Australia's defense, said today the war position had become so serious that "everything must be subordinated to the safety of the nation."

Forde said additional men would be called for full-time army duty because of the critical state of the Pacific situation. A number of volunteer defense companies, he revealed, would be trained in guerrilla warfare.

The additional mobilization, ordered by the war cabinet last night, will involve single men between the ages of 35 and 45 and married men between 18 and 35.

STUDY BILLS AT COUNCIL CAUCUS

City Councilmen Decide on One Measure, Can't Agree on Gas 'Curfew.'

Meeting in caucus last night at the city building in what Councilman C. N. Shultz said was an attempt to "thrash out" several pieces of legislation received too late for passage at last week's council meeting. City council discussed at least three proposals and agreed on the approval of one of them.

Although council has a rule that allegislation, except for emergency action, must be in the hands of the council clerk by 4 p. m., the day preceding the meeting, Shultz said the rule had been ignored for several months and had resulted in confusion in the handling of some legislation.

He added that a number of pieces of legislation intended for

Troop Moves Hint Early Resumption of Luzon Attack

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Movement of enemy troops indicate an early resumption of an attack in force against Gen. Douglas MacArthur forces in the Philippines, the war department reported today, although the fighting on Batan peninsula and enemy air activity have lessened.

There have been intermittent interchanges of artillery fire between the American island fortifications at the entrance of Manila bay and Japanese batteries on the Cavite shore of the bay, the department said.

The communique also said that six of the seven enemy planes reported shot down yesterday were destroyed by American fighter planes over Cavite province in one of the most spectacular air battles in the Philippine campaign. One American plane was reported missing.

Allied arms in the Pacific faced their blackest hours since Pearl Harbor.

The Japanese evidently were intent on following up their spectacular Singapore campaign by annihilating the only other potential threat to their southern drive—the stubborn American-Filipino forces on Batan peninsula.

War department communiques left scant room for doubt on the desperate, almost forlorn nature of MacArthur's fight, but Presi-

Schools, Patriotic Orders To Pay Tribute to Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's love of freedom and his work in holding the nation together during the Civil war crisis more than 80 years ago will be recalled by Mansfield and Richland county schools and patriotic organizations' Thursday when the country observes the great president's birthday anniversary.

Pupils in the city and county schools will have special programs tomorrow in recognition of the immortal Lincoln and the Richland County War Veterans' Republican club will hold a Lincoln dinner Friday night at the First Methodist church where Ohio's lieutenant governor, Paul M. Herbert, will speak.

Republicans throughout the nation will be especially active in celebration of the Civil war president's 133rd birthday anniversary. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, G. O. P. national chairman, said the Lincoln dinners will be largely patriotic affairs, but they would emphasize the need for maintaining the two-party system while concentrating on winning the war.

MARKET STILL DEPRESSED BY NEWS OF WAR

But Sales Urgency Lacking as Traders Wait More Far East Tidings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market today remained more or less depressed by the war news but, as in the previous session, selling urgency was lacking.

DuPont was an isolated soft spot, falling more than 2 points to a new bottom since 1938.

In the backward class were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible, General Motors, Chrysler, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Eastman Kodak and J. C. Penney.

The plight of Singapore persisted as the principal cloud on speculative and investment sentiment, brokers said. Many good earnings statements served as props for scattered issues but were pretty well ignored by the market as a whole.

Financial quarters saw further confirmation of the impact of mounting taxes on corporate profits in the preliminary summary of crucible steel. While the company for 1941 estimated net per share of $12.95 against $10.24 the year before, federal income and excess profits tax provisions amounted to $14,797,787 compared with $3,636,193 for 1940. Sales increased 64.4 per cent to $127,753,667 from $77,689,477 in the preceding year.

spreading across Batan peninsula, where MacArthur's lines are believed to extend for about 15 miles from the China sea to Manila bay, a war department informant said Japanese planes were carrying the brunt of the attack thus far.

The Japanese planes are aided—at MacArthur's rear behind the 4,500-foot Mariveles mountains—by Japanese artillery batteries around the fallen U. S. naval base of Cavite. Those guns are trying to blast the American island forts at the entrance to Manila bay.

For four days the Japanese guns have been loosing their shells against Corregidor fortress and Forts Hughes, Drum and Frank, but apparently without success. MacArthur has reported the destruction of several of the enemy big siege gun batteries.

Farewell to Singapore — Reporter's Epic Story of Dying City

By C. YATES McDANIEL

SINGAPORE, Feb. 11—(10:30 a. m.)—(11:30 p. m., Eastern War Time, Tuesday)—(AP)—The sky over Singapore is black with the smoke of a dozen huge fires this morning as I write my last message from this once beautiful, prosperous and peaceful city.

The roar and crash of cannonade and bursting bombs which are shaking my typewriter and my hands, which are wet with nervous perspiration, tell me without need of an official communique that the war which started nine weeks ago 400 miles away is on the outskirts of this shaken bastion of empire today.

I am sure there is a bright tropic sun shining somewhere overhead, but in my many-windowed room it is too dark to work without electric lights.

Over the low rise where the battle is raging I can see relay after relay of Japanese planes circling, then going into murderous dives on our soldiers who are fighting back in a hell over which there is no protecting screen of our own fighters.

But the Japanese are not completely alone in the skies this morning, for I just saw two "wild beasts"—obsolete bi-planes with an operating speed of about 100 miles an hour—fly low over the Japanese positions and unload bomb burdens with a resounding crash.

British fighter pilots still were taking on the enemy against overwhelming odds.

It makes me ashamed of myself, sitting here with my heart beating faster than their old motors, when I think what chance those lads have of getting back in their antiquated machines.

If ever brave men earned undying glory, those RAF pilots have this tragic morning.

There are many other brave men in Singapore today.

Not far away are anti-aircraft batteries in open spaces—they must be to have a clear field of fire.

Please overlook the break in continuity but a packet of bombs just landed so close I had to duck behind a wall which I hoped would—and did—screen the blast.

But those gun crews keep on fighting, their guns peppering smoke into the limited ceiling every time Japanese planes come near—that, almost constantly.

The all clear has just sounded—what a joke!

From the window I can see three Japanese planes flying low not a mile away.

A few minutes ago I heard a tragic two-way telephone conversation.

Eric Davis, director of the Malayan Broadcasting corporation, urged Governor Sir Shenton Thomas for permission to destroy the outlying broadcasting station. The governor demurred, saying the situation was not too bad, and refused to issue a direct order.

Davis telephoned the station in question, instructing the staff to keep on the air but to stand by for urgent orders.

We tuned in on its wavelength. In the middle of a broadcast in Malayan, urging the people of Singapore to stand firm, the station went dead.

I am leaving now in a car which I swear I will put into forward gear and head straight into the Straits of Malacca.

I left one car for the Japanese in Nanking in 1937 but never again.

Don't expect to hear from me for many days but please inform Mrs. McDaniel, Hotel Preanger, Bandoeng, Java, that I have left this land of the living and the dying.

At my elbow while I write this last dispatch is Captain O. K. Fearon, the minister of information adviser on censorship, who is breakfasting on biscuits and brandy.

Henry Steel, army public relations officer, who has seen us through a bad situation from the Thailand border to Singapore, has just told me I have ten minutes to pack up and leave.

When Henry says "go," I go.

So good-bye to Singapore.

British Stage Counter Thrust Against Enemy

BULLETIN

(By International News Service)

British defenders of Singapore reorganized their lines and struck with a counter-attack today while the Japs continued feinting thrusts at Australia and lightened their attacks on American troops in the Philippines.

The fact that the British were able to organize a counter-attack was in itself cheering but this unlooked for show of strength relieved in only slight measure the Japanese pressure by air and land which has brought the besieged fortress to its darkest hour.

At the same time, the Japs again stabbed tentatively at defense outposts of Australia. The latest Jap gesture was an air raid on the southeastern tip of New Guinea but there were no details on the damage inflicted.

But eyes of the world were focussed on Singapore.

An official military commentator in London announced that the British had achieved some success in the counter-attack and that the Japs had been rolled back on the northwestern invasion front. He emphasized, however, that the situation still was desperately serious, while asserting with cautious reserve that it had not deteriorated since yesterday when the Jap attack by land and air was intensified.

The Japanese high command continued to claim steady gains for the Nipponese troops and as night fell over the beleaguered island the Japs announced from Tokyo that the vanguard of their forces had entered the Singapore city area. This claim, however, was not borne out from any other source.

As the fight raged, Singapore reported that still more Japanese reinforcement have reached the fighting front in the past few hours. A British radio broadcast described the situation as "very grave." A Japanese communique claimed the invaders stormed and occupied Bukit Timah peak, a 600-foot hill that overlooks Singapore city sprawling five and a half miles to the southeast.

Concern over developments at Singapore was amply manifest at Washington. Military experts in the capital expressed belief the Jap successes in Singapore island

A Far Eastern Dunkirk

NEW YORK—(INS)—A British radio broadcast picked up by CBS and NBC said today that the British and Netherlands navies and mercantile marine are "evacuating women and children from Singapore as fast as they can."

The broadcast said the ships were "rushing in and out of the harbor, ignoring the dangers of almost continual land and air bombardment and the danger from enemy submarines" to carry out this task.

ANTI-WEEKLEY FORCES RALLY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Charging that the Butler school board had been "intimidated" Monday by 200 Butler school district residents who demanded that School Superintendent Willard S. Weekley be restored to his position, another group of Butlerites—150 strong—gathered last night to press for full hearing of the "misconduct" charges against the superintendent.

The meeting, which lasted until long after midnight, followed a day of quiet at the school after pupil demonstrations on Friday and Monday protested the school board's suspension of Weekley.

Sheriff's deputies were called to Butler for the second time this morning by a caller who informed them of possible violence in the village. Deputies responded to a similar call last night, but both times reported "everything quiet."

The group last night described

Second Largest Contingent of Soldiers Leaves County.

Richland county's largest contingent of soldiers since the United States entered the war more than two months ago left Mansfield at 8 a. m., today for the Fort Hayes induction station at Columbus.

While censorship restrictions prohibit publication of the number of men inducted, county draft board clerks said it was the second largest group to leave the county. More than 120 men were inducted in a group last winter.

The boards will send a large number of prospective selectees to Fort Hayes in about two weeks for their final physical examinations.

Under the new two-examination plan, registrants are checked first at the Mansfield armory for obvious physical defects and then must pass a rigid examination at Columbus before they are inducted.

By ALVIN L. KRIEG

"I felt that it was my responsibility to keep him from going 'over the hill.'"

This, in short, was the version given by Willis Harris, 46-year-old farmer, of the shooting that took place Monday afternoon in the room where he lies almost motionless because his back is broken.

Harris, from his bed, fired the bullet that struck James Wilson, 30-year-old parolee from Mansfield State Reformatory, according to Sheriff Frank E. Robinson.

Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz said Harris faces a charge of shooting with intent to wound—or a more serious charge if Wilson dies. A bullet passed through Wilson's body, piercing his intestine, and now peritonitis has set in. General hospital attaches give him a 50-50 chance for recovery.

Harris and Wilson are central figures in a real-life drama woven together by a thread of fantastic circumstances. It is the story of two men who went to the same farm from the reformatory—one after 18 years as a guard, the other after serving 13 months of a one-to-20 year term for forgery.

Harris became a guard on April 7, 1923, and retired last Aug. 1. His record at the reformatory was very satisfactory, Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke reported.

For some time the guard had

CLAPS RATION ON RETREADS

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced today that retreaded and recapped tires will be rationed starting Feb. 19.

Henderson said it was "quite probable" that there will be no crude rubber available for retreading tires outside of those for a small number of vehicles already eligible to obtain new tires and tubes.

Henderson explained that the rationing of retreaded and recapped tires of all grades and types of "camelback"—the rubber compound used to form new treads on worn tires—will be administered by the same setup now rationing new tires and tubes.

The price administrator pointed out that the war production board each month determines the amount, grade and type of "camelback," and a certain portion will be produced each month for retreading or recapping truck tires.

"None will be available this month for the retreading of passenger car tires and, perhaps, none for the month of March," Henderson warned.

Henderson asserted that "events will dictate the future production of this material."

The regulations for rationing retreaded and recapped tires cover those for passenger automobiles, trucks, busses, farm implements, road-grading equipment and motorcycles.

Here's What British Said As Singapore Threat Grew

Here are some of the statements made by British leaders during the course of the relentless drive of the Japanese down the Malayan peninsula.

Dec. 19—Empire authorities said: "Supreme efforts are being made to hold Malaya even at the expense of other fronts to prevent the possibility of a direct Japanese assault on Singapore."

Jan. 13: A "high British authority" predicted the united forces would have air superiority over the Japanese in the Malayan area within three days. (On Feb. 10 Japanese planes bombed Singapore city at their leisure.)

Jan. 27: Prime Minister Winston Churchill pledged to the house of commons in calling for a vote of confidence that the Malayan

Australians Subordinate Everything To War.

CANBERRA, Australia —(U.P.)— War Minister F. M. Forde, announcing a new mobilization of manpower for Australia's defense, said today the war position had become so serious that "everything must be subordinated to the safety of the nation."

Forde said additional men would be called for full-time army duty because of the critical state of the Pacific situation. A number of volunteer defense companies, he revealed, would be trained in guerrilla warfare.

The additional mobilization, ordered by the war cabinet last night, will involve single men between the ages of 35 and 45 and married men between 18 and 35.

STUDY BILLS AT COUNCIL CAUCUS

City Councilmen Decide on One Measure, Can't Agree on Gas 'Curfew.'

Meeting in caucus last night at the city building in what Councilman C. N. Shultz said was an attempt to "thrash out" several pieces of legislation received too late for passage at last week's council meeting, City council discussed at least three proposals and agreed on the approval of one of them.

Although council has a rule that allegislation, except for emergency action, must be in the hands of the council clerk by 4 p. m., the day preceding the meeting, Shultz said the rule had been ignored for several months and had resulted in confusion in the handling of some legislation.

He added that a number of pieces of legislation intended for

Drive Nets 17,000 Pounds of Scrap Iron In Two Days

Richland county's campaign for scrap iron and metal which opened Monday gained momentum today as 17,000 pounds were reported collected. A section of Central park was fenced off this morning for the convenience of donors desiring to save city and county trucks a special trip to their homes.

Collections in Mansfield have netted about 15,000 pounds alone, according to County Commissioner Charles W. Mitchell, in charge of the collection trucks. About 2,000 pounds have been donated by Weller township.

The house-to-house collection plan has been abandoned in favor of concentrating upon answering calls from persons who notify the American Legion home concerning donations, Mitchell said.

Mrs. Emma Young and Mrs. Edith Metcalf are stationed daily at the Legion from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. to receive these calls.

All funds from the collection of scrap metals will revert to buy articles for the men in service, Mitchell said, adding that a public accounting will be made at the end of the drive.

Troop Moves Hint Early Resumption of Luzon Attack

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Movement of enemy troops indicate an early resumption of an attack in force against Gen. Douglas MacArthur forces in the Philippines, the war department reported today, although the fighting on Batan peninsula and enemy air activity have lessened.

There have been intermittent interchanges of artillery fire between the American island fortifications at the entrance of Manila bay and Japanese batteries on the Cavite shore of the bay, the department said.

The communique also said that six of the seven enemy planes reported shot down yesterday were destroyed by American fighter planes over Cavite province in one of the most spectacular air battles in the Philippine campaign. One American plane was reported missing.

Allied arms in the Pacific faced their blackest hours since Pearl Harbor.

The Japanese evidently were intent on following up their spectacular Singapore campaign by annihilating the only other potential threat to their southern drive—the stubborn American-Filipino forces on Batan peninsula.

War department communiques left scant room for doubt on the desperate, almost forlorn nature of MacArthur's fight, but Presi-

Schools, Patriotic Orders To Pay Tribute to Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's love of freedom and his work in holding the nation together during the Civil war crisis more than 80 years ago will be recalled by Mansfield and Richland county schools and patriotic organizations Thursday when the country observes the great president's birthday anniversary.

Pupils in the city and county schools will have special programs tomorrow in recognition of the immortal Lincoln and the Richland County War Veterans' Republican club will hold a Lincoln dinner Friday night at the First Methodist church where Ohio's lieutenant governor, Paul M. Herbert, will speak.

Republicans throughout the nation will be especially active in celebration of the Civil war president's 133rd birthday anniversary. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, G. O. P. national chairman, said the Lincoln dinners will be largely patriotic affairs, but they would emphasize the need for maintaining the two-party system while concentrating on winning the war.

MARKET STILL DEPRESSED BY NEWS OF WAR

But Sales Urgency Lacking as Traders Wait More Far East Tidings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market today remained more or less depressed by the war news but, as in the previous session, selling urgency was lacking.

DuPont was an isolated soft spot, falling more than 2 points to a new bottom since 1938.

In the backward class were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible, General Motors, Chrysler, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Eastman Kodak and J. C. Penney.

The plight of Singapore persisted as the principal cloud on speculative and investment sentiment, brokers said. Many good earnings statements served as props for scattered issues but were pretty well ignored by the market as a whole.

Financial quarters saw further confirmation of the impact of mounting taxes on corporate profits in the preliminary summary of crucible steel. While the company for 1941 estimated net per share of $12.95 against $10.24 the year before, federal income and excess profits tax provisions amounted to $14,797,787 compared with $3,636,193 for 1940 Sales increased 64.4 per cent to $127,753,667 from $77,689,477 in the preceding year.

spreading across Batan peninsula, where MacArthur's lines are believed to extend for about 15 miles from the China sea to Manila bay, a war department informant said Japanese planes were carrying the brunt of the attack thus far.

The Japanese planes are aided—at MacArthur's rear behind the 4,500-foot Mariveles mountains—by Japanese artillery batteries around the fallen U. S. naval base of Cavite. Those guns are trying to blast the American island forts at the entrance to Manila bay.

For four days the Japanese guns have been loosing their shells against Corregidor fortress and Forts Hughes, Drum and Frank, but apparently without success. MacArthur has reported the destruction of several of the enemy big siege gun batteries

Farewell to Singapore — Reporter's Epic Story of Dying City

By C. YATES McDANIEL

SINGAPORE, Feb. 11—(10:30 a. m.)—(11:30 p. m., Eastern War Time, Tuesday)—(AP)—The sky over Singapore is black with the smoke of a dozen huge fires this morning as I write my last message from this once beautiful, prosperous and peaceful city.

The roar and crash of cannonade and bursting bombs which are shaking my typewriter and my hands, which are wet with nervous perspiration, tell me without need of an official communique that the war which started nine weeks ago 400 miles away is on the outskirts of this shaken bastion of empire today.

I am sure there is a bright tropic sun shining somewhere overhead, but in my many-windowed room it is too dark to work without electric lights.

Over the low rise where the battle is raging I can see relay after relay of Japanese planes circling, then going into murderous dives on our soldiers who are fighting back in a hell over which there is no protecting screen of our own fighters.

But the Japanese are not completely alone in the skies this morning, for I just saw two "wild beasts"—obsolete bi-planes with an operating speed of about 100 miles an hour—fly low over the Japanese positions and unload bomb burdens with a resounding crash.

British fighter pilots still were taking on the enemy against overwhelming odds.

It makes me ashamed of myself, sitting here with my heart beating faster than their old motors, when I think what chance those lads have of getting back in their antiquated machines.

If ever brave men earned undying glory, those RAF pilots have this tragic morning.

There are many other brave men in Singapore today.

Not far away are anti-aircraft batteries in open spaces—they must be to have a clear field of fire.

Please overlook the break in continuity but a packet of bombs just landed so close I had to duck behind a wall which I hoped would—and did—screen the blast.

But those gun crews keep on fighting, their guns peppering smoke into the limited ceiling every time Japanese planes come near—that, almost constantly.

The all clear has just sounded—what a joke!

From the window I can see three Japanese planes flying low not a mile away.

A few minutes ago I heard a tragic two-way telephone conversation.

Eric Davis, director of the Malayan Broadcasting corporation, urged Governor Sir Shenton Thomas for permission to destroy the outlying broadcasting station. The governor demurred, saying the situation was not too bad, and refused to issue a direct order.

Davis telephoned the station in question, instructing the staff to keep on the air but to stand by for urgent orders.

We tuned in on its wavelength. In the middle of a broadcast in Malayan, urging the people of Singapore to stand firm, the station went dead.

I am leaving now in a car which I swear I will put into forward gear and head straight into the Straits of Malacca.

I left one car for the Japanese in Nanking in 1937 but never again.

Don't expect to hear from me for many days but please inform Mrs. McDaniel, Hotel Preanger, Bandoeng, Java, that I have left this land of the living and the dying.

At my elbow while I write this last dispatch is Captain O. K. Fearon, the minister of information adviser on censorship, who is breakfasting on biscuits and brandy.

Henry Steel, army public relations officer, who has seen us through a bad situation from the Thailand border to Singapore, has just told me I have ten minutes to pack up and leave.

When Henry says "go," I go.

So good-bye to Singapore.

British Stage Counter Thrust Against Enemy

Japs Stab at Australian Outposts With Air Raid on New Guinea; Lighten Assault on MacArthur Forces; Foe Claims Steady Gains.

BULLETIN

CALCUTTA — (UP) — The Singapore radio still was broadcasting at noon today.

(By International News Service)

British defenders of Singapore reorganized their lines and struck with a counter-attack today while the Japs continued feinting thrusts at Australia and lightened their attacks on American troops in the Philippines.

The fact that the British were able to organize a counter-attack was in itself cheering but this unlooked for show of strength relieved in only slight measure the Japanese pressure by air and land which has brought the besieged fortress to its darkest hour.

At the same time, the Japs again stabbed tentatively at defense outposts of Australia. The latest Jap gesture was an air raid on the southeastern tip of New Guinea but there were no details on the damage inflicted.

But eyes of the world were focussed on Singapore.

An official military commentator in London announced that the British had achieved some success in the counter-attack and that the Japs had been rolled back on the northwestern invasion front. He emphasized, however, that the situation still was desperately serious, while asserting with cautious reserve that it had not deteriorated since yesterday when the Jap attack by land and air was intensified.

The Japanese high command continued to claim steady gains for the Nipponese troops and as night fell over the beleaguered island the Japs announced from Tokyo that the vanguard of their forces had entered the Singapore city area. This claim, however, was not borne out from any other source.

As the fight raged, Singapore reported that still more Japanese reinforcement have reached the fighting front in the past few hours. A British radio broadcast described the situation as "very grave." A Japanese communique claimed the invaders stormed and occupied Bukit Timah peak, a 600-foot hill that overlooks Singapore city sprawling five and a half miles to the southeast.

Concern over developments at Singapore was amply manifest at Washington. Military experts in the capital expressed belief the Jap successes in Singapore island

A Far Eastern Dunkirk

NEW YORK—(INS)—A British radio broadcast picked up by CBS and NBC said today that the British and Netherlands navies and mercantile marine are "evacuating women and children from Singapore as fast as they can."

The broadcast said the ships were "rushing in and out of the harbor, ignoring the dangers of almost continual land and air bombardment and the danger from enemy submarines" to carry out this task.

ANTI-WEEKLEY FORCES RALLY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Charging that the Butler school board had been "intimidated" Monday by 200 Butler school district residents who demanded that School Superintendent Willard S. Weekley be restored to his position, another group of Butlerites —150 strong—gathered last night to press for full hearing of the "misconduct" charges against the superintendent.

The meeting, which lasted until long after midnight, followed a day of quiet at the school after pupil demonstrations on Friday and Monday protested the school board's suspension of Weekley.

Sheriff's deputies were called to Butler for the second time this morning by a caller who informed them of possible violence in the village. Deputies responded to a similar call last night, but both times reported "everything quiet."

The group last night described

Second Largest Contingent of Soldiers Leaves County.

Richland county's largest contingent of soldiers since the United States entered the war more than two months ago left Mansfield at 8 a. m., today for the Fort Hayes induction station at Columbus.

While censorship restrictions prohibit publication of the number of men inducted, county draft board clerks said it was the second largest group to leave the county. More than 120 men were inducted in a group last winter.

The boards will send a large number of prospective selectees to Fort Hayes in about two weeks for their final physical examinations.

Under the new two-examination plan, registrants are checked first at the Mansfield armory for obvious physical defects and then must pass a rigid examination at Columbus before they are inducted.

Farmer, Ex-OSR Guard, Tells Why He Shot Parolee Working for Him

By ALVIN L. KRIEG

"I felt that it was my responsibility to keep him from going 'over the hill.'"

This, in short, was the version given by Willis Harris, 46-year-old farmer, of the shooting that took place Monday afternoon in the room where he lies almost motionless because his back is broken.

Harris, from his bed, fired the bullet that struck James Wilson, 30-year-old parolee from Mansfield State Reformatory, according to Sheriff Frank E. Robinson.

Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz said Harris faces a charge of shooting with intent to wound —or a more serious charge if Wilson dies. A bullet passed through Wilson's body, piercing his intestine, and now peritonitis has set in. General hospital attaches give him a 50-50 chance for recovery.

Harris and Wilson are central figures in a real-life drama woven together by a thread of fantastic circumstances. It is the story of two men who went to the same farm from the reformatory—one after 18 years as a guard, the other after serving 13 months of a one-to-20 year term for forgery.

Harris became a guard on April 7, 1923, and retired last Aug. 1. His record at the reformatory was very satisfactory, Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke reported.

For some time the guard had

CLAPS RATION ON RETREADS

Henderson Sets Feb. 19 as Date For Limiting Sale of Recapped Tires.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced today that retreaded and recapped tires will be rationed starting Feb. 19.

Henderson said it was "quite probable" that there will be no crude rubber available for retreading tires outside of those for a small number of vehicles already eligible to obtain new tires and tubes.

Henderson explained that the rationing of retreaded and recapped tires of all grades and types of "camelback"—the rubber compound used to form new treads on worn tires—will be administered by the same setup now rationing new tires and tubes.

The price administrator pointed out that the war production board each month determines the amount, grade and type of "camelback," and a certain portion will be produced each month for retreading or recapping truck tires.

"None will be available this month for the retreading of passenger car tires and, perhaps, none for the month of March," Henderson warned.

Henderson asserted that "events will dictate the future production of this material."

Drive Nets 17,000 Pounds of Scrap Iron In Two Days

Richland county's campaign for scrap iron and metal which opened Monday gained momentum today as 17,000 pounds were reported collected. A section of Central park was fenced off this morning for the convenience of donors desiring to save city and county trucks a special trip to their homes.

Collections in Mansfield have netted about 15,000 pounds alone, according to County Commissioner Charles W. Mitchell, in charge of the collection trucks. About 2,000 pounds have been donated by Weller township.

The house-to-house collection plan has been abandoned in favor of concentrating upon answering calls from persons who notify the American Legion home concerning donations, Mitchell said.

Mrs. Emma Young and Mrs. Edith Metcalf are stationed daily at the Legion from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. to receive these calls.

All funds from the collection of scrap metals will revert to buy articles for the men in service, Mitchell said, adding that a public accounting will be made at the end of the drive.

Here's What British Said As Singapore Threat Grew

Here are some of the statements made by British leaders during the course of the relentless drive of the Japanese down the Malayan peninsula.

Dec. 19—Empire authorities said: "Supreme efforts are being made to hold Malaya even at the expense of other fronts to prevent the possibility of a direct Japanese assault on Singapore."

Jan. 13: A "high British authority" predicted the united forces would have air superiority over the Japanese in the Malayan area within three days. (On Feb. 10 Japanese planes bombed Singapore city at their leisure.)

Jan. 27: Prime Minister Winston Churchill pledged to the house of commons in calling for a vote of confidence that the Malayan

Australians Subordinate Everything To War.

CANBERRA, Australia —(U.P.)— War Minister F. M. Forde, announcing a new mobilization of manpower for Australia's defense, said today the war position had become so serious that "everything must be subordinated to the safety of the nation."

Forde said additional men would be called for full-time army duty because of the critical state of the Pacific situation. A number of volunteer defense companies, he revealed, would be trained in guerrilla warfare.

The additional mobilization, ordered by the war cabinet last night, will involve single men between the ages of 35 and 45 and married men between 18 and 35.

Although council has a rule that allegislation, except for emergency action, must be in the hands of the council clerk by 4 p. m., the day preceding the meeting, Shultz said the rule had been ignored for several months and had resulted in confusion in the handling of some legislation.

He added that a number of pieces of legislation intended for

Troop Moves Hint Early Resumption of Luzon Attack

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Movement of enemy troops indicate an early resumption of an attack in force against Gen. Douglas MacArthur forces in the Philippines, the war department reported today, although the fighting on Batan peninsula and enemy air activity have lessened.

There have been intermittent interchanges of artillery fire between the American island fortifications at the entrance of Manila bay and Japanese batteries on the Cavite shore of the bay, the department said.

The communique also said that six of the seven enemy planes reported shot down yesterday were destroyed by American fighter planes over Cavite province in one of the most spectacular air battles in the Philippine campaign. One American plane was reported missing.

Allied arms in the Pacific faced their blackest hours since Pearl Harbor.

The Japanese evidently were intent on following up their spectacular Singapore campaign by annihilating the only other potential threat to their southern drive—the stubborn American-Filipino forces on Batan peninsula.

War department communiques left scant room for doubt on the desperate, almost forlorn nature of MacArthur's fight, but Presi-

Schools, Patriotic Orders To Pay Tribute to Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's love of freedom and his work in holding the nation together during the Civil war crisis more than 80 years ago will be recalled by Mansfield and Richland county schools and patriotic organizations Thursday when the country observes the great president's birthday anniversary.

Pupils in the city and county schools will have special programs tomorrow in recognition of the immortal Lincoln and the Richland County War Veterans' Republican club will hold a Lincoln dinner Friday night at the First Methodist church where Ohio's lieutenant governor, Paul M. Herbert, will speak.

Republicans throughout the nation will be especially active in celebration of the Civil war president's 133rd birthday anniversary. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, G. O. P. national chairman, said the Lincoln dinners will be largely patriotic affairs, but they would emphasize the need for maintaining the two-party system while concentrating on winning the war.

GEN. JOHNSON: Expect Mrs. Roosevelt to Defend OCD

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON— I have just been talking to a man who has seen the most recent figures on war production. He is a man who knows exactly what such figures mean.

Gen. Johnson.

The trouble with the average lay-reporter writing on production reports is that he doesn't. His news is like a report that 10,000 head of stock have been sent to market and doesn't tell the farmer whether they are cows, steers, calves, sheep or porkers, fat, lean, prime or worthless. And it has just about as much value. We have been fooled often by this kind of stuff.

But my friend is as near expert on war production as anyone we have. He had no more intention of making these confidential figures public than I have, but the important point in mentioning them is that for the first time since we began to produce at all, this hitherto pessimistic critic finds himself surprised with optimism.

The progress is really astonishing. It is not only the figures themselves, but the fact that, applying the rate of improvement they show, to the actual rate of production, some of the most optimistic guesses—even of the president himself—which a few weeks ago seemed unbelievable — now appear attainable.

This does not mean that the record is uniformly satisfactory. There are still uncured lags among some of the most sorely needed items.

But they stand out like sore thumbs where attention can be concentrated on them and in the typical American system of bringing all the elements of a mass-produced article to the assembly line in an even rate of flow, we have a right to expect increased speed where it is most necessary.

The most encouraging aspects of this picture are not the number of lethal weapons actually being turned out weekly—heart-warming as that is. It is, first, that the rate of flow is uniform and uniformly increasing. It is, second, and more important, that the great batteries of massive machines are there in place, operating at their steady, condensed, coordinated, rate of speed and with ample room in most cases for a very large expansion of both number and speed—which means that we could be more generous still in estimating the future.

It is not an exaggeration to call it a modern industrial miracle. No such record in retooling, much less in converting plants to the production of a completely new article, exists in ours or any other industrial history.

I happen to have some small part in the supervision of a small textile shop which, up to six months ago, had never manufactured a machined metal product and had no machine tools, although it had on its staff a genius in design of metal-working machinery. Today that plant is turning out a respectable poundage of finely machined metal, sub-assemblies using many of its old textile workers who have been retrained.

A curious question of credit will arise here. The new flood of war production comes in with Donald Nelson, as General Knudsen goes out. Surely Nelson did not do it. The bare outlines of his organization have not even yet formed. Knudsen didn't do much of it. He was too busy with other things.

How about giving a little credit to the resiliency, patriotism and ingenuity of our old and much maligned kicking boy—American industry—and plans and production policies of the army and navy which, after all, have done the job to date.

PAGING MISS MERMAN: This week Miss Regina Crewe had a luncheon engagement with Miss Ethel Merman. They were to meet at Fefe's Beach, but an hour or so before lunch-time Regina learned that the Beach was now closed for lunch, so she decided to make it Twenty-One. She telephoned Ethel's house to tell her and was informed that Ethel had gone down to Macy's for a little shopping.

Regina called Macy's—which, as you know, is the town's largest department store — and calmly said:

"Would you please get Miss Ethel Merman on the telephone? She's probably not wearing a hat and I imagine she's in the furniture or household departments."

Macy's, unruffled, said:

"Hold on, please."

And so it was that Miss Merman, in Macy's basement buying a double-boiler, was confronted by a smiling salesgirl, who said: "Oh, Miss Merman, you're wanted on the telephone."

She was so astonished at the phenomenon she could hardly say a word throughout lunch. And as for Miss Crewe, she feels that despite the slogan, she IS in debt to Macy's.

AGENTS TELL OF TRAILING SPY THROUGH OHIO

Boredom Vanishes as Accused Man Hears of Check-Up on His Actions.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—The bored indifference of Kurt Frederick Ludwig, alleged master-mind of a German spy ring, vanished today with the news that federal bureau of investigation agents shadowed him night and day for three months before he was arrested.

He suspected that FBI agents were near him when he traveled west last summer, his "secretary," blond Lucy Boehmler, had testified, but the fact evidently exceeded his suspicion. For a week, round-shouldered Ludwig had slouched in his chair, listening impassively to testimony against him and six others being tried on a charge of espionage.

Francis E. Crosby, FBI special agent, testified that on June 17, 1941, he followed Ludwig on a tour of the New York and New Jersey waterfronts and saw him meet Rene Froehlich, then a private attached to the army medical corps on Governor's Island, now a defendant in the case. Ludwig handed Froehlich a package, the agent said, and afterward they went to an uptown theater which was showing the German propaganda film "Victory In the West."

They emerged from the theater carrying brief cases, then separated, the agent said. Ludwig went to the west side waterfront, observing ships tied up there, including the ill-fated French liner Normandie.

Another G-man, Eugene Rinta, said that he saw Ludwig in the Fremont hotel at Fremont, O., on Aug. 4 and trailed him to Port Clinton, near which is Camp Perry. Ludwig drove slowly past the camp, the agent testified, proceeded two miles beyond it, then turned and repassed it. Later that evening Rinta sat in his hotel room, which was across a court from Ludwig's, and watched through field glasses while the accused spy entered notes in a notebook, he testified.

Next day the trail was picked up by Agent Logan J. Lane, who said he saw Ludwig on a road halfway between Wright and Patterson airports, near Dayton, O. Ludwig ostensibly was fixing a flat tire, he said, but later drove to Wright field, where he passed about 20 minutes watching bombers land and take off.

REDUCE OCTANE IN GASOLINES

Companies Act Quietly, So If Your Engine Knocks Blame It on the War.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—If your automobile motor has developed an unusual knock, blame it on the war. All oil companies have quietly reduced the octane content of their gasolines.

Premium grades, which formerly ran about 80 octane, have been reduced to 78 and in some cases 76. Regular grades, which were about 75 octane, are down to 72 and some cases 70. Thus today's premium gasoline isn't much better in anti-knock qualities than the better pre-war standard grades, oil circles said.

The changes were made at the request of the federal petroleum co-ordinator because of increased war needs for 100 octane aviation gasoline, and because of the shortage of lead. An official of a leading Ohio oil company said the step was taken after estimates that half the nation's tetraethyl capacity would be needed for the armed forces and for lend-lease requirements.

"The average is down about three octanes," said this executive "We considered telling the public but were afraid we would defeat the purpose and start a run on the higher octane gasoline. We did tell our operators about it, so they could answer any complaints from the public."

If a run should develop, oil circles believe new measures may be taken. One executive held premium gasoline would in that case be rationed or be withdrawn from the market.

STATE PATROL TO ORGANIZE WAR EMERGENCY UNIT HERE

Organization of a 40-man war time auxiliary to the state highway patrol in Richland county was started today by Corp. Carl F. Strayer, officer in charge of the Mansfield patrol headquarters.

To be composed entirely of members of American Legion posts in Mansfield, Bellville, Shelby, Plymouth and Shiloh. Creation of the auxiliary was ordered by Gov. John W. Bricker. Ohio state Legion headquarters has pledged cooperation with the plan.

Sam V. Fox, commander of McVey post of the Legion in Mansfield, has been placed in charge of his organization's part of the plan and has called a meeting for Friday night at which the 40 chosen men will be given the first lesson on a series of 19 points designed to equip them for war emergency work. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m., at John Simpson auditorium.

Included in the 19 points are: organization and plans of operation, first aid training, means of communications, a study of regional geography and traffic regulations, the dispatching of traffic, control of emergency regulations, means of evacuating of dangerous areas, safety precautions to be used in danger zones, protection of criminal evidence, methods of controling looting and assaults, a study of police fire lines, mob control, evacuation of public assemblies, enforcement of blackouts, self defense techniques, safeguarding of weapons and ammunition and observation techniques.

Besides the Richland county organization Corp. Stayer said he will set up a similar body in Holmes county drawing upon American Legion posts in Millersburg and Holmesville.

In line with this first announcement of patrol activity to aid civilian defense work, Col. Lynn Black, superintendent of the Ohio patrol, authorized Corp. Strayer today to list other activities his men have been undertaking during the past year.

Among these was a state-wide survey of defense plants, bridges, airports, pipe lines and power stations which has just been completed.

Besides this survey the patrol has made investigations for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has trained defense plant guards, taken steps to apprehend espionage and sabotage agents and facilitated more than 250 troop movements.

Laff-a-Day

"As long as you're the dummy this hand, Lou, would you mind fixing a little supper for my husband?"

Dayton Cramer, who lives in Plymouth and works for an automobile agency in Mansfield, is still trying to catch up on all the sleep he lost Sunday night as a result of the change to war time. Arriving home late that night, he moved his alarm clock ahead an hour before retiring. Up at the usual hour Monday, he drove to Mansfield and was surprised to find the office dark. It would be a good joke on the others, he thought, if they forgot about the time change. The other employes arrived in an hour, however, and Cramer learned the joke was on him. His mother had turned his clock up an hour Sunday night and he moved it ahead another hour, making him an hour early at work.

The selection was made by a popular vote with only male students at the college being allowed to vote. Three of the girls selected as the most beautiful came from the northern part of the state.

Compton, who recognized him almost at once, said that Galento was on a barnstorming tour of the country and that while waiting between trains in Greenwich, he sang and chatted with the hotel guests, while eating his luncheon.

SENATE GROUP FAVORS HER TESTIFYING

First Lady Likely To Get Broad Invitation To Bring Along Proteges.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Screen actor Melvyn Douglas will remain at his OCD post, Director James M. Landis told a press conference today, but he indicated that dancer Mayris Chaney would be removed from her post, should the physical fitness division fall under his jurisdiction.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt may go before the senate appropriations committee, it developed today, to answer congressional charges that there is too much glamour, too many frills, and high salaries and too many dancers in her section of the Office of Civilian Defense.

In fact she is expected to get an indirect invitation so broad that she may also bring her protege, Dancer Mayris Chaney, and Movie Star Melvyn Douglas before the committee. It was the appointment of Miss Chaney to a $4,600 OCD job in Mrs. Roosevelt's section and the selection of Douglas as coordinator of artists and actors work in another division that stirred up the congressional tempest.

The burden of defending OCD, however, is expected to fall on Dean James Landis of Harvard university, who became the big boss of civilian defense with the resignation of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York.

Sen. McKellar (D) Tenn., chairman of the sub-committee handling the house-approved $100,000,000 OCD fund, said Mrs. Roosevelt would be welcome to appear and testify.

Sen. Mead (D) N. Y., close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, went further in proposing exploration of the charges which kept the house in an uproar for two sessions and resulted in an amendment barring dancers, fan dancers and street shows from OCD activities.

"I suggest that the appropriations committee give all a chance to be heard," he said. "Let's go into the matter of morale and see what the experience has been in England.

"I would suggest that the head of the organization appear and be allowed to bring in any assistants he chooses. He could bring Mrs. Roosevelt or anyone else. We do not invite witnesses, but I would favor hearing Mrs. Roosevelt if she wants to be heard."

So it is possible that Mrs. Roosevelt, who declared she would be "perfectly delighted" to tell members of the congress the "truth" about appointment of Miss Chaney and Douglas, may appear with each flanked on her side.

Senate administration leaders sought to prevent a repetition of the uproarious debate which marked house consideration of the defense fund. They discouraged "raising a fuss" over charges of Mrs. Roosevelt appointing favorites, or "pinks" and frills in OCD. But the controversy would not down.

Soldier Honored For Pearl Harbor Plane Warning

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The army's records of World war II gave official recognition and a reward today to staff Sgt. Joseph L. Lockard, of Williamsport, Pa., for his timely though unheeded warning that Japanese planes were approaching Pearl Harbor for the surprise attack last Dec. 7.

In a communique the war department disclosed the award of the distinguished service medal to the soldier who first detected the approach of a "large force" of planes at 7:02 a. m. on the fateful day, but whose warning was brushed aside by an officer until the attack started 53 minutes later.

Already promoted from private to sergeant for "exceptionally meritorious service," Lockard, in addition to the medal has been designated to attend the officers candidate school at Fort Monmouth, N. J., beginning March 13.

Without attempting to explain the reason the warning was ignored, the army paid tribute to Lockard because he voluntarily remained on duty at the aircraft detective service.

Making a Soldier of Sugar

As we have sent men abroad to fight for America—as we have sent money—as we have drafted steel, with other commodities, into fighting-service or enlisted wheat and other fighting-foods—so we must make a soldier of sugar.

Nutriment for the nations at war is as vital to the outcome as the powder that feeds the guns. A great nutrient in time of peace—in war a veritable sinew—sugar is now called upon to play a heroic part, to supply the peoples of our Allies—whose strength is ours.

To wrap up sugar in the American flag, so to speak, and put it into the fight becomes a duty of loyalty. It will be borne cheerfully by every industry, every dealer, and every individual it falls upon. Upon certain industries it falls heavily—and especially on the workers who derive their living from them. Yet the American civilian is in this war with the soldier. American business great and small, American capital from Wall Street to the remotest country bank, is with the Government at every step of the way. The U. S. means Us. We all of us, are in the fight with everything we have, the best of everything we ch

This company regards it a privilege to com- with the Government's request, clearly to fulfill its responsibility to to re- duce consumption to the end of conservation we pledge our full efforts in every direction that opportunity may disclose, in manufacture as well as beyond the scope of our immediate interests; and in this effort generally we bespeak the co-operation of dealers and consumers everywhere.

WORLD WAR II

History repeats itself in World War II. Sugar has been called to war again. Our government has restricted the use of sugar for all. Naturally, that includes Coca-Cola.

You'll continue to find Coca-Cola around the corner from anywhere, though we regret that you won't be able to enjoy the pause that refreshes as often as you might like. Our volume has been reduced. But this we pledge: the character of Coca-Cola will be unimpaired. The American people can continue to trust its quality.

As in 1917, we count upon the patience of dealers everywhere. Conserving sugar is another step toward Victory. Whatever any of us may have, or may not have, Victory we must have above all else!

Time To Recognize Reality of War

TODAY'S impression of the situation in the Far East is that by sheer force of greater manpower and air equipment the Japanese are entrenching themselves in a way that will greatly increase the difficulties of eventual victory by the United Nations and will prolong the war indefinitely.

So many "impossible" things have been happening with such rapidity that Americans appear to have not yet become fully awakened to present peril and future probabilities.

"Impregnable" Singapore is on the verge of falling to the enemy, if this catastrophe has not already occurred, and unless effective help is soon given to General MacArthur and his small fighting force on Batan peninsula in the Philippines there can be little hope that he can long continue to stave off the concentration of strength Japan will be enabled to direct at that point.

As war activities now stand, great dependence is being placed on Russia's success in beating back the enemy in that area and on China's telling blows against Japanese invaders in the Far East, but the great British Empire, in its set-up for defense of Singapore and other of its Pacific possessions, is not measuring up to expectations, nor is the United States, as "the arsenal of democracy," showing the speed or acumen needed to transform the blueprints of an elaborate war program into strong military action.

While billions of dollars are being voted for war purposes, and at a time when American freedom and lives are threatened, there is a continuance of quibbling over relatively petty things—training children to dance as a part of civilian defense, pensions for congressmen, labor demands for wage increases and double time for Sunday work, concern of the Civil Liberties League for enemy aliens, and the like.

Unless there is quick acceptance of the realities of the present dangers it is not impossible that the so-called "all out" war effort of this country will revert to a "defense" action, with west and east coasts under as serious threat as Singapore now is.

The war will be won—but not by such lackadaisical ineptitude and short-sighted policies as have thus far prevailed.

Boy Scout Anniversary Week

MANSFIELD Boy Scouts are joining this week in observance of the thirty-second anniversary of the introduction of Scouting in America—at a time when the importance of this organization is more generally recognized than ever before.

The essentials of Boy Scout training are designed to develop the recognized qualities of good citizenship, with emphasis on loyalty to country and respect for its laws. Scouting also takes into account the need for spiritual strengthening, as well as physical and mental growth, and its ideals reflect the fine Americanism which will be a great need during the years of reconstruction and re-adjustment that will follow war.

It is only fair to expect that each generation will show advancement over preceding ones, and it is in preparation for the greater tasks of the future, in every field of endeavor, that today's Boy Scouts—and their sisters, the Girl Scouts—are being encouraged, under capable and earnest leadership, to gain practical knowledge of the principles of true Americanism.

It is furtherance of this purpose that opportunity will be given next Tuesday for Boy Scouts to serve in various of the city offices, so that they may learn, at first-hand, about the operation of municipal government and the way in which different departments function.

Among important responsibilities of adults is to encourage young people to make ready for work that they will soon be called upon to do—and no better avenue of satisfactory accomplishment in group activities has yet been found than that presented in the principles, practices and ideals of Scouting.

Ask Retirement, With Pension

APPLICATION for retirement, on pension, made by Major General Short and Rear Admiral Kimmel, presents a strange situation, and one which seems to need further action in determining the extent to which these commanders were responsible for the Pearl Harbor disaster December 7.

Both General Short and Admiral Kimmel were removed from their posts immediately after Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and were charged with dereliction of duty in not taking adequate precautions against enemy action.

One interpretation of their dereliction is that they were victims of a "system" rather than being individually at fault, but if they are to be retired on a life pension of $6,000 a year, under such circumstances, it may appear to the taxpaying public that this is another "system" that needs revision.

If guilt rests upon these commanders for the frightful loss of lives and military property at Pearl Harbor it seems quite proper that they should be removed from service without benefit of pension—but if they did all that could be expected of them under operation of a faulty "system" there seems to be no reason why they should not be restored to duty, as able generals and admirals can be used to advantage "for the duration."

Convenient Information Source

SO MANY questions are being asked, so many bits of information are needed nowadays, that a whole library seems inadequate for the task of supplying all the facts for which people are asking each day.

But there is one book of information, convenient and inexpensive, that can be confidently turned to for thousands of facts which are assembled right up to time of publication each year, and that is the World Almanac—now on news stands in its 1942 edition.

This publication, with its 960 compactly filled pages, and at a cost under one dollar, is a veritable gold mine of current and statistical information on just about every imaginable subject and it is confidently recommended for home and office reference.

It should also be made clear, for listeners, that those "parasites" cluttering up Washington are not French refugees who have left their home city.

The department of agriculture is asking farmers to save hay wire—possibly for use in government departments that haven't already gone that way.

Civilians Clamor for Hardships

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

EVIDENTLY disappointed, the American public is impatiently inquiring of official Washington why the wartime hardships and dangers it has been looking forward to are so slow in starting.

Every department and agency in the capital receives at least a handful of such queries in each mail delivery. They're complaints, in effect. Those who submit them obviously feel that, now we're in the conflict, they're entitled to some of the excitement and fun of it.

They read, they say, about the regimentation they're due to be subjected to, but they don't experience any of it.

Of course the fact is that its effects haven't had time to filter down to the ultimate consumer yet. His auto's still serviceable. His tires are in good condition. It will be quite a while before he needs a new refrigerator or washing machine. So far as he's concerned, nearly everything's perfectly normal, and he frets because his whole world hasn't been completely transformed, as he'd expected.

And blackouts! "What's the sense," asked a letter the other day to the war department, from a mid-western woman, "in a black out with no air raid?"

Officialdom, caught decidedly off base by the nature of the outcry, which is precisely the opposite of what it had anticipated, tries to reassure the home folk with solemn promises that the pinch really and truly will hit 'em presently—just wait a bit and, meanwhile, don't worry. They do, though.

When It Comes—

That, upon its arrival, they'll like what's coming to 'em probably wouldn't be very safe betting.

There seems to be no doubt, however, that quite a sizable proportion of our population has been anxious, all along, to ascertain, personally, to what extent civiliandom's sideswiped by today's new-fangled war conditions. Some commentators refer to it as hysteria. I don't think it's that. I think it's curiosity.

The general supposition was that it was scheduled to be satisfied directly following our own implication in the muss, and there has been a lag instead. Hence the complex simply has been intensified.

Womenfolk have a lot to do with wartime readjustments.

"They raise hades," a friend of mine, in the civilian governmental service, remarked to me a few days ago, "with social relationships.

"And the remedy for it," he continued, "is to insist upon celibacy on the part of all officers above the rank of corporal. A general's wife always announces, 'I'm Mrs. General So-and-so.' An admiral's wife says, 'I'm Mrs. Admiral Such-and-such.' That makes 'em better than all others, and they take on airs accordingly. Pretty soon the general and the admiral catch the contagion from the two dames and they swell around correspondingly in masculine circles. If it weren't for their wives they wouldn't think of it."

Meantime civiliandom clamors for action.

It demands genuine air raids, rationing as IS rationing, hardship, peril, excitement—a war with sufficient ginger to allow the home folk a fair share in the sport. It shouldn't be an exclusive monopoly of our armed forces. There's enough of it to go around among all elements, isn't there?

I wouldn't care to guarantee that civilians will indorse it, if they get their percentage, but their plaints shouldn't be disregarded while they're emanating 'em.

Man About Manhattan

Crowd Pleasers

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The grim circumstances that have sobered world thinking in recent years have destroyed a phenomenon of public life. The day of the "crowd pleaser" is ended. A more exacting public taste prefers performance to heroics, merit to color. It takes more than a strong personality to conquer the masses nowadays.

A decade ago a crowd pleaser enjoyed the full favor of fortune. He appeared in politics, in sports, in literature and even in crime. By dint of some vague endowment, never accurately identified, he stood out above the crowd, and took his rewards as a matter of course.

EXAMPLES of celebrated crowd-pleasers come to mind. New York's ex-mayor Jimmy Walker was one. So was William Hale Thompson — who called himself "Big Bill The Builder"—mayor of Chicago. The Prince of Wales was peerless among them. In sports there were Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey. Those two combined proficiency with personality to a high degree, and strictly speaking, were more than crowd pleasers.

Teddy Roosevelt was perhaps the first of them to register in the public conscience. Countless analyses have been made of the "first Roosevelt's" power over people. One of the shrewdest is that "he talked in pictures." Which is to say, when he said something it immediately conjured up a vision in the stodgiest imagination. The hearer "saw" what Roosevelt said.

"BIG BILL The Builder" possessed that talent, too. His frequent political campaigns in Chicago were often clownish, but when Big Bill got through speaking his hearers were pretty well convinced that he was entitled to their vote. He liked to paint pictures of disaster. He could take something as dull as the city's water toll and terrify the unthinking constituent with prospects of insufficient drinking or bathing water unless Mayor Thompson were retained in office.

Babe Ruth acted rather than spoke his pictures. As he approached the plate, swinging his bat, he suggested the Mighty Casey of the verse. A home run was the very least the crowd expected, as, of course, it was the most.

DEMPSEY never was more full of storm and fury—and color—than when things were going badly. None who saw him climb back into the ring after Louis Angel Firpo had knocked him through the ropes will forget the savage minutes that followed. And the consequences of that return on a battered hulk within seconds.

And so passes the crowd pleaser. In all likelihood, he will return again when the public thirst for heroes needs new slaking. Perhaps he is a symbol of peace and plenty. Perhaps war gives us too many heroes to allow us to acclaim the accident of personality.

George Sessions Perry, who wrote "Hold Autumn In Your Hand," is a Texan who holds no collegiate degrees. Says Mr. Perry, "I went to various colleges for three years without ever graduating from the freshman class."

Japan Spurs Quislings In China But Chiang Kai-Shek Holds Firm

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The house foreign affairs committee heard some glowing reports of the bravery and tough fighting qualities of Chinese troops when Secretary of War Stimson and other cabinet officers testified behind closed doors on the $500,000,000 loan to China.

However, the committee also got some information about internal affairs in China which wasn't so heartening.

Secretary Morgenthau warned that the morale of the Chinese civilian population was not the best. Initial Jap successes in the Pacific Southwest had something to do with this, he said, but the chief reason was acute and protracted economic distress, which had brought inflation and widespread starvation.

"We must take steps without delay to stabilize Chinese currency," Morgenthau held. "That's just as important, if not more so, at the moment than arms shipments."

The situation has been greatly aggravated recently, the committee was told, by intensive fifth column activities to spread dissension in the Chinese army and distrust of the United States among civilians.

In this connection, Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long made some eye-opening disclosures about secret Jap maneuvers to negotiate a peace with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The Chinese war lord indignantly rejected these overtures. Long declared, but Quisling elements in China were continuing their intrigues among both troops and civilians.

These traitorous forces are led by several high officers formerly on Chiang Kai-shek's staff. Long urged speedy and unanimous action by congress because of the psychological effect it would have in the Orient.

Orientals are very sensitive about the manner in which an offer of help is made, he explained. While the money is desperately needed, and while the Chinese are entitled to aid as our allies, the Japs would try to impugn our motives if congress gave them the slightest opportunity.

Heroic Chinese.

STIMSON devoted most of his statement to eulogizing the Chinese army.

"No army in the history of the world has braver or more resourceful soldiers than the Chinese," he said in effect. "The best proof of this is that they are continuing to fight, with unbelievable sacrifice and against almost insurmountable odds, after five years of aggression by a ruthless invader.

"Cut off from communications, supplies and shipping—with no financial resources to speak of—they have resisted the enemy with a heroism and tenacity that has won the admiration of free peoples everywhere."

Questioned about the ability of the Chinese to hold out, Stimson insisted that, with U. S. and British help, they would more than hold their own against the Japs. The war secretary also told the committee that there are many strategically located airports in China available for bombing raids on Japan.

Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones also joined in acclaiming the Chinese. He particularly lauded their honesty, pointing out that the Chinese government has a splendid record of paying its debts to the United States.

"The Chinese are a proud people who believe in paying their debts," Jones said. "A significant thing to me is the fact that they have not taken all the credit that has been available to them in loan authorizations by the Export-Import Bank."

Glamor-Pusses.

UP ON Capitol Hill a lot of people think that not even the Japanese themselves could have found a better way to hurt war morale than by the current epidemic of "Glamor-Pusses."

"Glamor-Pusses" is the name given to the squad of actors, dancers and artists who hace recently moved in on Washington, climaxed by Mrs. Roosevelt's dancing friend, blonde Mayris Chaney who draws $4,600 for directing child health in the Office of Civilian Defense.

Real fact is that the advent of Mayris Chaney merely touched off publicity regarding the fact that quite a list of Glamor-Pusses have been dancing their way through the defense picture for many months.

In all fairness it should be said that some of them have contributed more to the war effort than certain bungling $1-a-year big businessmen. Even Mrs. Roosevelt's blonde dancing girl at a salary of $4,600 a year probably is less costly to the American taxpayer than certain national defense business advisers who opposed setting up tin smelters in the U. S. A., and later were found to have been close to the British tin monopoly. Their cost to the nation was priceless months and millions of dollars in economic dislocation.

Glamor Roll-Call.

TROUBLE with most of the Glamor-Pusses is that their specialty is glamor, yet they have been given important executive jobs where glamor is a handicap. Here is the roll-call on some of them:

Robert E. Sherwood — Pulitzer Prize winner; author of "Idiot's Delight", "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"; a great writer, but a man who should sit on a mountain top, isolated, while he turns out masterpieces. Instead, he was given an important executive job with the Donovan committee.

Stephen Vincent Benet—famous poet; and Thornton Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "Our Town." Both originally were with the Donovan committee, but recognized that they didn't fit and got out.

Garson Kanin—movie director for RKO who produced "The Great Man Votes" and "Tom, Dick and Harry." Kanin was drafted, and produced films for the signal corps, where, as a private, he had to whisper instructions to the captain, who then gave the orders—because a private cannot give orders. Kanin has now been released from the army and is with OEM where he produced a documentary film called "Tanks" in cooperation with Orson Welles.

Walt Disney—who has just signed a contract with the Rockefeller committee to spend half his time making animated cartoons for Pan-American propaganda. In Brazil, Disney was the best Good Neighbor propagandist the United States has sent.

Melvyn Douglas—new director of the arts division of civilian defense, around whose head has broken a recent storm of abuse. (Douglas is a man of courage and ideas who ran away to enlist in the last war at the age of 17.) However, he is a star actor, not an executive. Yet he is placed in charge of a very important office. Furthermore, shortly after taking over that office, he is going back to Hollywood to spend seven weeks producing another picture. Meanwhile who runs his office?

Another inside fact—believe it or not—is that Melvyn Douglas has been promised a job as assistant to Harry Hopkins handling lend-lease matters. Great an actor as he is, it is doubtful whether Mr. Douglas knows much about the vital problem of shipping artillery, airplanes, shells, bombsights, and tanks to the armies of Russia, Britain and China.

Merrygogram: Japanese sour pusses in the Far East won't be affected by glamor-pusses in Washington.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—As long as I can remember, some adverse critics of the Hill have been insisting that congress in general, and the senate in particular, is a sort of secret society in which, once you have subscribed to the oath of office, you can depend upon your most perverse colleague's coming to your aid in time of trouble.

Now, I've seen enough political hair-pulling in both houses to know that the oratorical salve the members occasionally rub on each other's backs isn't wholly free of ground glass.

I know also where those critics get their ammunition. The senate frequently piles it up on a silver platter and hands it over to them. Such was the case the other day when Sen. Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, took the floor and defended the senate interstate commerce committee, Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, the senate and congress against allegations that failure to pass legislation permitting wire-tapping in espionage cases had anything to do with the surprise attack at Pearl Harbor.

TRACING the history of wire-tapping legislation from 1934, Senator Truman pointed out that when the house in 1941 voted down the wire-tapping bill, the senate interstate commerce committee had passed over introducing a similar bill.

"Reports came to individual senators (of testimony before the house committee that reported out the bill) emphasizing the need for care in introducing this kind of legislation," said the senator. "We heard, for example, that important witnesses before the house committee had testified that wire-tapping might endanger national defense, might hurt workers' morale, and thus interfere with maximum production . . .

"Finally, word came to various members of our subcommittee that many labor organizations had appeared before the house committee in opposition to the wire-tapping bill. They asserted that such a power would be used more against labor than against spies."

A YEAR earlier, the house had passed a wire-tapping bill, but the legislative year was almost over, and according to Senator Truman, "when many senators were absent, and when many pressing matters of a far more serious nature were occupying the time of those senators who were in Washington."

There is much more to the senator's defense, including the assertion that the federal bureau of investigation had resorted to wire-tapping in Hawaii before Dec. 7, 1941, since there were opinions from the department of justice that there was no specific law against wire-tapping, only a law against evidence obtained this way being used against accused persons.

Referring to a statement by Sen. Alben Barkley, Democratic floor leader, Sen. David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, said: "I assume that when the senator says that all of us ought to assume some responsibility for what happened at Pearl Harbor, he refers to the general smugness of the American people, and he does not mean that congress failed to take any action that might have changed the situation?"

And Senator Barkley said: "I did have in mind the general smugness of the American people." Senator Walsh added: "Which congress shared."

The B. & O. Railroad

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

OUR Honey Creek valley extends east and west a distance of ten miles. North and south highways cross the steep and narrow ridges—but years ago, when a railroad came winding from the south, it could not penetrate the barriers so well—and even to this day it pursues a devious course, that serves small cities and villages all along the way. It faithfully gathers the fruits and harvests of inland places, and carries them to distant markets.

Freight and passenger depots in all the villages are relics of the past. They enjoy no claim to beauty nor plans of modern architecture. Each stands on its none-too-firm foundation, dedicated during an early today to utility alone.

The dark terracotta paint, applied perhaps a half century ago, has ceased to blister and pare off. What remains there now is permanent. The old pot-bellied stove stands in the center of the waiting room and in the agent's office, still another, firmly set upon an ancient metal sheet. The whole place is saturated with odors of coal smoke, floor oil and stale tobacco.

On one aged, yellow wall hangs a picture of some hotel that had flourished in the 70's or 80's. Women on the pictured street wore mutton sleeves, wasp waists, hoop skirts and astounding hats. Men had full, heavy beards, or mustaches and sideburns.

"Those were the good old days," said an aged, stooped old man, as he walked with me into the office to get a bill of freight. "I slept in that hotel, once, myself. It most likely ain't standin' any more. Me and Anthea went there on our honeymoon. We started right from this depot. 'Twas new then, and clean painted—looked mighty good, we thought—everything looked good to us that day, I remember."

WE CANNOT see, from our little valley home, the long two-engined freights—they pass behind the hills. But when a southeast wind blows through the valley, it brings the rumble closer, as though it crossed the very border of our farm. Night and day, along this open lane of traffic, long lines of coal cars, box cars, stock cars move. The shrill whistle of the panting locomotive pains our ears. On foggy nights the flare of the fireman's open engine door paints grotesque wavering shadows on the murky sky.

The POWER to WIN

HIS INVENTIONS . . . - OUR VICTORY

Dynamos from coast to coast hum a hymn for Victory! The hands and feet of millions of soldiers of industry operate the machinery that is turning out the parts that will go into the making of warships and airplanes, land tanks, and guns which will one day sound the salute announcing a full and just Peace! A network of communications brings together those fighting for democracy all over the earth---that their efforts may be coordinated though their forces be embattled miles apart! And the power to win is ours---because a little boy born to Scotch and Dutch parents grew up in America, where he had the opportunity to fulfill his ambition! A telegraph operator at 15; a full fledged inventor at 21; father of the incandescent lamp and more practical electrical apparatus than any other one man---he harnessed the power which, illuminating the world, helped banish ignorance, eliminate drudgery---and nurture industry. Today we again thank THOMAS ALVA EDISON for the power to win: the electrical power which is making munitions and fighting ships of the sea and air: the electrical power which shall spark our ultimate victory.

The Ohio Public Service Co.

In Mansfield There's PLENTY of

P O W E R

For Defense . . .
For Homes . . .

Today we can continue to live in the electrical way because there is plenty of electric power in the territories served by the Ohio Public Service Company to run the humming defense factories, the factories making civilian needs, and for the homes of our communities. From our own large generating plants and from our interconnections we can, right now, deliver considerably more electric power than we have ever been called upon to provide. This power is available for defense and for your home. So continue to live in the comfortable, convenient, carefree way . . . electrically.

Time To Recognize Reality of War

TODAY'S impression of the situation in the Far East is that by sheer force of greater manpower and air equipment the Japanese are entrenching themselves in a way that will greatly increase the difficulties of eventual victory by the United Nations and will prolong the war indefinitely.

So many "impossible" things have been happening with such rapidity that Americans appear to have not yet become fully awakened to present peril and future probabilities.

"Impregnable" Singapore is on the verge of falling to the enemy, if this catastrophe has not already occurred, and unless effective help is soon given to General MacArthur and his small fighting force on Batan peninsula in the Philippines there can be little hope that he can long continue to stave off the concentration of strength Japan will be enabled to direct at that point.

As war activities now stand, great dependence is being placed on Russia's success in beating back the enemy in that area and on China's telling blows against Japanese invaders in the Far East, but the great British Empire, in its set-up for defense of Singapore and other of its Pacific possessions, is not measuring up to expectations, nor is the United States, as "the arsenal of democracy," showing the speed or acumen needed to transform the blueprints of an elaborate war program into strong military action.

While billions of dollars are being voted for war purposes, and at a time when American freedom and lives are threatened, there is a continuance of quibbling over relatively petty things—training children to dance as a part of civilian defense, pensions for congressmen, labor demands for wage increases and double time for Sunday work, concern of the Civil Liberties League for enemy aliens, and the like.

Unless there is quick acceptance of the realities of the present dangers it is not impossible that the so-called "all out" war effort of this country will revert to a "defense" action, with west and east coasts under as serious threat as Singapore now is.

The war will be won—but not by such lackadaisical ineptitude and short-sighted policies as have thus far prevailed.

Boy Scout Anniversary Week

MANSFIELD Boy Scouts are joining this week in observance of the thirty-second anniversary of the introduction of Scouting in America—at a time when the importance of this organization is more generally recognized than ever before.

The essentials of Boy Scout training are designed to develop the recognized qualities of good citizenship, with emphasis on loyalty to country and respect for its laws. Scouting also takes into account the need for spiritual strengthening, as well as physical and mental growth, and its ideals reflect the fine Americanism which will be a great need during the years of reconstruction and re-adjustment that will follow war.

It is only fair to expect that each generation will show advancement over preceding ones, and it is in preparation for the greater tasks of the future, in every field of endeavor, that today's Boy Scouts—and their sisters, the Girl Scouts—are being encouraged, under capable and earnest leadership, to gain practical knowledge of the principles of true Americanism.

It is furtherance of this purpose that opportunity will be given next Tuesday for Boy Scouts to serve in various of the city offices, so that they may learn, at first-hand, about the operation of municipal government and the way in which different departments function.

Among important responsibilities of adults is to encourage young people to make ready for work that they will soon be called upon to do—and no better avenue of satisfactory accomplishment in group activities has yet been found than that presented in the principles, practices and ideals of Scouting.

Ask Retirement, With Pension

APPLICATION for retirement, on pension, made by Major General Short and Rear Admiral Kimmel, presents a strange situation, and one which seems to need further action in determining the extent to which these commanders were responsible for the Pearl Harbor disaster December 7.

Both General Short and Admiral Kimmel were removed from their posts immediately after Japan's surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and were charged with dereliction of duty in not taking adequate precautions against enemy action.

One interpretation of their dereliction is that they were victims of a "system" rather than being individually at fault, but if they are to be retired on a life pension of $6,000 a year, under such circumstances, it may appear to the tax-paying public that this is another "system" that needs revision.

If guilt rests upon these commanders for the frightful loss of lives and military property at Pearl Harbor it seems quite proper that they should be removed from service without benefit of pension—but if they did all that could be expected of them under operation of a faulty "system" there seems to be no reason why they should not be restored to duty, as able generals and admirals can be used to advantage "for the duration."

Convenient Information Source

SO MANY questions are being asked, so many bits of information are needed nowadays, that a whole library seems inadequate for the task of supplying all the facts for which people are asking each day.

But there is one book of information, convenient and inexpensive, that can be confidently turned to for thousands of facts which are assembled right up to time of publication each year, and that is the World Almanac—now on news stands in its 1942 edition.

This publication, with its 960 compactly filled pages, and at a cost under one dollar, is a veritable gold mine of current and statistical information on just about every imaginable subject and it is confidently recommended for home and office reference.

It should also be made clear, for listeners, that those "parasites" cluttering up Washington are not French refugees who have left their home city.

The department of agriculture is asking farmers to save hay wire—possibly for use in government departments that haven't already gone that way.

Civilians Clamor for Hardships

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

EVIDENTLY disappointed, the American public is impatiently inquiring of official Washington why the wartime hardships and dangers it has been looking forward to are so slow in starting.

Every department and agency in the capital receives at least a handful of such queries in each mail delivery. They're complaints, in effect. Those who submit them obviously feel that, now we're in the conflict, they're entitled to some of the excitement and fun of it.

They read, they say, about the regimentation they're due to be subjected to, but they don't experience any of it.

Of course the fact is that its effects haven't had time to filter down to the ultimate consumer yet. His auto's still serviceable. His tires are in good condition. It will be quite a while before he needs a new refrigerator or washing machine. So far as he's concerned, nearly everything's perfectly normal, and he frets because his whole world hasn't been completely transformed, as he'd expected.

And blackouts! "What's the sense," asked a letter the other day to the war department, from a mid-western woman, "in a black out with no air raid?"

Officialdom, caught decidedly off base by the nature of the outcry, which is precisely the opposite of what it had anticipated, tries to reassure the home folk with solemn promises that the punch really and truly will hit 'em presently—just wait a bit and, meanwhile, don't worry. They do, though.

When It Comes—

That, upon its arrival, they'll like what's coming to 'em probably wouldn't be very safe betting.

There seems to be no doubt, however, that quite a sizable proportion of our population has been anxious, all along, to ascertain, personally, to what extent civiliandom's sideswiped by today's new-fangled war conditions. Some commentators refer to it as hysteria. I don't think it's that. I think it's curiosity.

The general supposition was that it was scheduled to be satisfied directly following our own implication in the muss, and there has been a lag instead. Hence the complex simply has been intensified.

Womenfolk have a lot to do with wartime readjustments.

"They raise hades," a friend of mine, in the civilian governmental service, remarked to me a few days ago, "with social relationships.

"And the remedy for it," he continued, "is to insist upon celibacy on the part of all officers above the rank of corporal. A general's wife always announces, 'I'm Mrs. General So-and-so.' An admiral's wife says, 'I'm Mrs. Admiral Such-and-such.' That makes 'em better than all others, and they take on airs accordingly. Pretty soon the general and the admiral catch the contagion from the two dames and they swell around correspondingly in masculine circles. If it weren't for their wives they wouldn't think of it."

Meantime civiliandom clamors for action.

It demands genuine air raids, rationing as IS rationing, hardship, peril, excitement—a war with sufficient ginger to allow the home folk a fair share in the sport. It shouldn't be an exclusive monopoly of our armed forces. There's enough of it to go around among all elements, isn't there?

I wouldn't care to guarantee that civilians will indorse it, if they get their percentage, but their plaints shouldn't be disregarded while they're emanating 'em.

Man About Manhattan

Crowd Pleasers

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The grim circumstances that have sobered world thinking in recent years have destroyed a phenomenon of public life. The day of the "crowd pleaser" is ended. A more exacting public taste prefers performance to heroics, merit to color. It takes more than a strong personality to conquer the masses nowadays.

A decade ago a crowd pleaser enjoyed the full favor of fortune. He appeared in politics, in sports, in literature and even in crime. By dint of some vague endowment, never accurately identified, he stood out above the crowd, and took his rewards as a matter of course.

EXAMPLES of celebrated crowd-pleasers come to mind. New York's ex-mayor Jimmy Walker was one. So was William Hale Thompson — who called himself "Big Bill The Builder"—mayor of Chicago. The Prince of Wales was peerless among them. In sports there were Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey. Those two combined proficiency with personality to a high degree, and strictly speaking, were more than crowd pleasers.

Teddy Roosevelt was perhaps the first of them to register in the public conscience. Countless analyses have been made of the "first Roosevelt's" power over people. One of the shrewdest is that "he talked in pictures." Which is to say, when he said something it immediately conjured up a vision in the stodgiest imagination. The hearer "saw" what Roosevelt said.

"BIG BILL The Builder" possessed that talent, too. His frequent political campaigns in Chicago were often clownish, but when Big Bill got through speaking his hearers were pretty well convinced that he was entitled to their vote. He liked to paint pictures of disaster. He could take something as dull as the city's water toll and terrify the unthinking constituent with prospects of insufficient drinking or bathing water unless Mayor Thompson were retained in office.

Babe Ruth acted rather than spoke his pictures. As he approached the plate, swinging his bat, he suggested the Mighty Casey of the verse. A home run was the very least the crowd expected, as, of course, it was the most.

DEMPSEY never was more full of storm and fury—and color—than when things were going badly. None who saw him climb back into the ring after Louis Angel Firpo had knocked him through the ropes will forget the savage minutes that followed. And the consequences of that return on a battered hulk within seconds.

And so passes the crowd pleaser. In all likelihood, he will return again when the public thirst for heroes needs new slaking. Perhaps he is a symbol of peace and plenty. Perhaps war gives us too many heroes to allow us to acclaim the accident of personality.

George Sessions Perry, who wrote "Hold Autumn In Your Hand," is a Texan who holds no collegiate degrees. Says Mr. Perry, "I went to various colleges for three years without ever graduating from the freshman class."

Japan Spurs Quislings In China But Chiang Kai-Shek Holds Firm

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The house foreign affairs committee heard some glowing reports of the bravery and tough fighting qualities of Chinese troops when Secretary of War Stimson and other cabinet officers testified behind closed doors on the $500,000,000 loan to China.

However, the committee also got some information about internal affairs in China which wasn't so heartening.

Secretary Morgenthau warned that the morale of the Chinese civilian population was not the best. Initial Jap successes in the Pacific Southwest had something to do with this, he said, but the chief reason was acute and protracted economic distress, which had brought inflation and widespread starvation.

"We must take steps without delay to stabilize Chinese currency," Morgenthau held. "That's just as important, if not more so, at the moment than arms shipments."

The situation has been greatly aggravated recently, the committee was told, by intensive fifth column activities to spread dissension in the Chinese army and distrust of the United States among civilians.

In this connection, Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long made some eye-opening disclosures about secret Jap maneuvers to negotiate a peace with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. The Chinese war lord indignantly rejected these overtures, Long declared, but Quisling elements in China were continuing their intrigues among both troops and civilians.

These traitorous forces are led by several high officers formerly on Chiang Kai-shek's staff. Long urged speedy and unanimous action by congress because of the psychological effect it would have in the Orient.

Orientals are very sensitive about the manner in which an offer of help is made, he explained. While the money is desperately needed, and while the Chinese are entitled to aid as our allies, the Japs would try to impugn our motives if congress gave them the slightest opportunity.

Heroic Chinese.

STIMSON devoted most of his statement to eulogizing the Chinese army.

"No army in the history of the world has braver or more resourceful soldiers than the Chinese," he said in effect. "The best proof of this is that they are continuing to fight, with unbelievable sacrifice and against almost insurmountable odds, after five years of aggression by a ruthless invader.

"Cut off from communications, supplies and shipping—with no financial resources to speak of—they have resisted the enemy with a heroism and tenacity that has won the admiration of free peoples everywhere."

Questioned about the ability of the Chinese to hold out, Stimson insisted that, with U. S. and British help, they would more than hold their own against the Japs. The war secretary also told the committee that there are many strategically located airports in China available for bombing raids on Japan.

Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones also joined in acclaiming the Chinese. He particularly lauded their honesty, pointing out that the Chinese government has a splendid record of paying its debts to the United States.

"The Chinese are a proud people who believe in paying their debts," Jones said. "A significant thing to me is the fact that they have not taken all the credit that has been available to them in loan authorizations by the Export-Import Bank."

Glamor-Passes.

UP ON Capitol Hill a lot of people think that not even the Japanese themselves could have found a better way to hurt war morale than by the current epidemic of "Glamor-Passes."

"Glamor-Passes" is the name given to the squad of actors, dancers and artists who hace recently moved in on Washington, climaxed by Mrs. Roosevelt's dancing friend, blonde Mayris Chaney who draws $4,600 for directing child health in the Office of Civilian Defense.

Real fact is that the advent of Mayris Chaney merely touched off publicity regarding the fact that quite a list of Glamor-Passes have been dancing their way through the defense picture for many months.

In all fairness it should be said that some of them have contributed more to the war effort than certain bungling $1-a-year big businessmen. Even Mrs. Roosevelt's blonde dancing girl at a salary of $4,600 a year probably is less costly to the American taxpayer than certain national defense business advisers who opposed setting up tin smelters in the U. S. A., and later were found to have been close to the British tin monopoly. Their cost to the nation was priceless months and millions of dollars in economic dislocation.

Glamor Roll-Call.

TROUBLE with most of the Glamor-Pusses is that their specialty is glamor, yet they have been given important executive jobs where glamor is a handicap. Here is the roll-call on some of them:

Robert E. Sherwood — Pulitzer Prize winner; author of "Idiot's Delight", "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"; a great writer, but a man who should sit on a mountain top, isolated, while he turns out masterpieces. Instead, he was given an important executive job with the Donovan committee.

Stephen Vincent Benet—famous poet; and Thornton Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "Our Town." Both originally were with the Donovan committee, but recognized that they didn't fit and got out.

Garson Kanin — movie director for RKO who produced "The Great Man Votes" and "Tom, Dick and Harry." Kanin was drafted, and produced films for the signal corps, where, as a private, he had to whisper instructions to the captain, who then gave the orders—because a private cannot give orders. Kanin has now been released from the army and is with OEM where he produced a documentary film called "Tanks" in cooperation with Orson Welles.

Walt Disney — who has just signed a contract with the Rockefeller committee to spend half his time making animated cartoons for Pan-American propaganda. In Brazil, Disney was the best Good Neighbor propagandist the United States has sent.

Melvyn Douglas—new director of the arts division of civilian defense, around whose head has broken a recent storm of abuse. (Douglas is a man of courage and ideas who ran away to enlist in the last war at the age of 17.) However, he is a star actor, not an executive. Yet he is placed in charge of a very important office. Furthermore, shortly after taking over that office, he is going back to Hollywood to spend seven weeks producing another picture. Meanwhile who runs his office?

Another inside fact—believe it or not—is that Melvyn Douglas has been promised a job as assistant to Harry Hopkins handling lend-lease matters. Great an actor as he is, it is doubtful whether Mr. Douglas knows much about the vital problem of shipping artillery, airplanes, shells, bombsights, and tanks to the armies of Russia, Britain and China.

Merrygogram: Japanese sour pusses in the Far East won't be affected by glamor-pusses in Washington.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — As long as I can remember, some adverse critics of the Hill have been insisting that congress in general, and the senate in particular, is a sort of secret society in which, once you have subscribed to the oath of office, you can depend upon your most perverse colleague's coming to your aid in time of trouble.

Now, I've seen enough political hair-pulling in both houses to know that the oratorical salve the members occasionally rub on each other's backs isn't wholly free of ground glass.

I know also where those critics get their ammunition. The senate frequently piles it up on a silver platter and hands it over to them. Such was the case the other day when Sen. Harry S. Truman, of Missouri, took the floor and defended the senate interstate commerce committee, Chairman Burton K. Wheeler, the senate and congress against allegations that failure to pass legislation permitting wire-tapping in espionage cases had anything to do with the surprise attack at Pearl Harbor.

TRACING the history of wire-tapping legislation from 1934, Senator Truman pointed out that when the house in 1941 voted down the wire-tapping bill, the senate interstate commerce committee had passed over introducing a similar bill.

"Reports came to individual senators (of testimony before the house committee that reported out the bill) emphasizing the need for care in introducing this kind of legislation," said the senator. "We heard, for example, that important witnesses before the house committee had testified that wire-tapping might endanger national defense, might hurt workers' morale, and thus interfere with maximum production . . .

"Finally, word came to various members of our subcommittee that many labor organizations had appeared before the house committee in opposition to the wire-tapping bill. They asserted that such a power would be used more against labor than against spies."

A YEAR earlier, the house had passed a wire-tapping bill, but the legislative year was almost over, and according to Senator Truman, "when many senators were absent, and when many pressing matters of a far more serious nature were occupying the time of those senators who were in Washington."

There is much more to the senator's defense, including the assertion that the federal bureau of investigation had resorted to wire-tapping in Hawaii before Dec. 7, 1941, since there were opinions from the department of justice that there was no specific law against wire-tapping, only a law against evidence obtained this way being used against accused persons.

Referring to a statement by Sen. Alben Barkley, Democratic floor leader, Sen. David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, said: "I assume that when the senator says that all of us ought to assume some responsibility for what happened at Pearl Harbor, he refers to the general smugness of the American people, and he does not mean that congress failed to take any action that might have changed the situation?"

And Senator Barkley said: "I did have in mind the general smugness of the American people." Senator Walsh added: "Which congress shared."

"Those were the good old days," said an aged, stooped old man, as he walked with me into the office to get a bill of freight. "I slept in that hotel, once, myself. WE CANNOT see, from our little valley home, the long two-engined freights—they pass behind the hills. But when a southeast wind blows through the valley, it brings the rumble closer, as though it crossed the very border of our farm. Night and day, along this open lane of traffic, long lines of coal cars, box cars, stock cars move. The shrill whistle of the panting locomotive pains our ears. On foggy nights the flare of the fireman's open engine door paints grotesque wavering shadows on the murky sky.

The POWER to WIN

HIS INVENTIONS . . . - OUR VICTORY

Dynamos from coast to coast hum a hymn for Victory! The hands and feet of millions of soldiers of industry operate the machinery that is turning out the parts that will go into the making of warships and airplanes, land tanks, and guns which will one day sound the salute announcing a full and just Peace! A network of communications brings together those fighting for democracy all over the earth---that their efforts may be coordinated though their forces be embattled miles apart! And the power to win is ours---because a little boy born to Scotch and Dutch parents grew up in America, where he had the opportunity to fulfill his ambition! A telegraph operator at 15; a full fledged inventor at 21; father of the incandescent lamp and more practical electrical apparatus than any other one man---he harnessed the power which, illuminating the world, helped banish ignorance, eliminate drudgery---and nurture industry. Today we again thank THOMAS ALVA EDISON for the power to win: the electrical power which is making munitions and fighting ships of the sea and air: the electrical power which shall spark our ultimate victory.

The Ohio Public Service Co.

10 S. Park St. Dial 4171-6

POWER

For Defense . . .
For Homes . . .

Today we can continue to live in the electrical way because there is plenty of electric power in the territories served by the Ohio Public Service Company to run the humming defense factories, the factories making civilian needs, and for the homes of our communities. From our own large generating plants and from our interconnections we can, right now, deliver considerably more electric power than we have ever been called upon to provide. This power is available for defense and for your home. So continue to live in the comfortable, convenient, carefree way . . . electrically.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

SURELY I was not mistaken. The Colonial picket gate with its square posts depicted at the right of the odd water color painting Olina had received through the mail was that of The Larches, the country place near our Sag Harbor farm.

I was glad that Stephen Redfield's back was toward me.

If he could have seen my face when my eyes fell upon that gate post, I am sure he would have detected the surprise and knowledge in my eyes, for while, when I have sufficient warning of danger, I can keep my features controlled, yet when some unexpected shock comes to me, I do not have the "poker face" owned by my father and both the Underwoods.

I sent an involuntary glance at Olina and in the expression of her bright eyes, watching me, I saw that she had noted my start of surprise. With a wary eye upon Stephen Redfield's back, I put my finger swiftly to my lips and was immediately answered by a comprehending nod. Then, assured of her discretion, I went back to my study of the water color.

Painting's Significance.

The detail of the gate had been worked out with great care, while the other objects in the crowded painting were sketchy. But I noticed with feverishly mounting excitement that the artist had drawn the block topping the right hand post as fitting tightly, while that on the left hand post was slightly awry, and from beneath it projected a tiny sliver of white.

To the casual observer it would appear that the artist had been careless, and that his brush had slipped. But to me this was highly significant.

I sent a quick glance at Olina from beneath my eyelashes. Had she seen the significance of this as I had, or had she even recognized the gateway?

Of course, I decided, she had been very young in that time of melodrama, and absorbed in the tempest of events which had caught her up. But I did not see how even a child could forget that gatepost.

Post a Letter Box.

I knew at once what the sliver of white signified. It meant a letter. For in those days of stress we had discovered that the cover of the left hand post was loose, and we had utilized the discovery in making a post box of the hollow space beneath.

For the brief second which a flight of memory takes my mind traveled backward to that hectic time when Olina, who had run away from her parents on their much touted tour of America—the swathed figure of a maid had been carried on board their returning ship with the story that the princess was dangerously ill—had taken residence at the furnished mansion called The Larches, under the chaperonage of an old couple devoted to her, and had promptly involved us in a swirling melodrama which nearly had resulted in death for Harry Underwood, playing his last dual role of ostensible international gangster and real government spy.

It had involved more than that. It had seen the flowering, and quick fading, of what Dicky had termed our "international romance," when Olina and Noel had become betrother, more on Olina's initiative than on Noel's, and when Georges—young heir to the throne of Trees, who at Olga's urging had come to America in search of the princess, to whom his family had urged his marriage—had fallen for Mary's charms and urged his suit upon her with final success.

Old Melodrama.

The melodrama—and the love idyll—had ended with Harry Underwood's apparent death. His underworld associates—the few that escaped the final debacle — had execrated his memory ever since. This was behind Lillian's fear that he would go back among them in search of Marion. All that had ended with the shifting back of allegiances on the part of the four young people. Olina had gone back to her home, as had Georges, their betrothal had been formally announced, and then later the engagement was as formally broken.

Georges had succeeded to the throne of Trees, and when it fell, at the same time as that of Transvania, it was assumed that the young king had been killed or was confined in prison.

This message, by no possibility could have come from him, but from whom else?

My memory again supplied the answer. The wise old man who had been Olina's supposed servant at The Larches must be trying to get in touch with her, and for some reason dared not risk ordinary means of communication.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE ENEMY MAY HELP

SOMETIMES the best contract for your side would not be apparent if your opponents kept quiet. But when they start to bid they may give you a chance to tell your partner something, or may help him to tell you something of importance. By piecing together the various messages flashed, you may be able to figure out that a No Trump game would be a good idea.

(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♦	1 ♠	2 ♦
Pass	3 ♦	3 ♥	Dbl
3 ♠	Dbl	Pass	3 NT

Vulnerability was one factor in that final bid, made by John E. Simon, great St. Louis player, in a rubber game at the Cavendish club in New York. He reckoned, and rightly, that the set of 3-Spades probably would not be as valuable as a probable game with his side vulnerable, though his partner's double of that bid was necessary to let him know a No Trump try would be sound.

Reckoning that the spades were probably bunched against his side and the hearts not, West led his partner's secondly bid suit, the heart 10. East took it with the K and switched to the club 9, the 10 and J covering and Mr. Simon ducking in dummy, to lure a return to his combination tenace, or else a heart, either of which would build the game trick for him. West fired back the heart 5 to the K, dummy discarding the diamond 8, and East led his club 8, bringing the Q, K and A.

Then came a beautiful double squeeze for an extra trick. The diamond A, 10 to the K, heart Q for a toss of the diamond 9, the diamond 7 and diamond 6 set it up. When the 5 was led, declarer's hand also held the club 3, spade J and heart 7, dummy the three spades and club 6. West had to hold his club 7 to guard against the club 6, so threw one of his three remaining spades, whereupon the club 6 was thrown from dummy. Now East was squeezed. He needed his heart J to guard against the 7, so threw one of his three remaining spades, whereupon the dummy's spades took the last three tricks.

THIS DAY'S astral auguries seem to stimulate a determined attempt to tackle big propositions with might and main, in an effort to annihilate a condition of crystallization, impediment, opposition and a want of cooperation all along the line. While the ambitions, the spirit of initiative and boldness, may be backed up by some very practical ideas, still it might be wise to continue to postpone.

Those whose birthday it is may be imbued with a spirit of initiative, courage and daring, with determination to crash through all manner of opposing forces — to break down opposition, obstruction and perhaps duplicity by main strength—but this effort is not likely to vanquish antagonisms.

A child born on this day should have much talent, initiative, courage and resolution, but may encounter overwhelming obstacles to put over its ambitious programs.

BRITISH STAGE COUNTER DRIVE AT SINGAPORE

City Still Holds as Japs Stab at Australian Defense Outposts.

have paved the way for increased enemy air attacks against Gen. Douglas MacArthur's outnumbered army in the Philippines.

They contended the collapse of Singapore's aerial defenses has freed a large number of Japanese fighting planes for use against the American and Filipino troops on the Batan peninsula.

Also regarded as serious was the fact that Japanese siege guns on the Cavite shores of Manila bay have continued to blast MacArthur's forts despite successful counter-barrages.

Gravity with which the war department regards MacArthur's position was indicated by the fact that two communiques in a single day stressed that the already great odds against MacArthur's men have increased.

The Singapore battle overshadowed all other military developments, but on the diplomatic front another important development occurred in Washington.

This was the revelation that the United States has sent a strong diplomatic note to the Vichy government concerning French aid to the Axis forces in Libya.

The note was understood to have expressed the American government's belief that France exceeded her armistice obligations by sending motor trucks and food supplies to the forces of Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel. And it carried an implied warning that unless France halts such aid to the Axis, the United States will reconsider its entire policy towards France.

Latest news from other sectors of the far eastern war zone said British imperial forces were fighting a small force of Japanese north of Martaban on the western shore of the Salween river. But it was denied that the Japs have established bridgeheads on the western banks of the Salween, the river "shield" protecting Rangoon and the strategic Burma road.

A British communique denied the Jap crossing of the Salween had been carried out in force.

In China, troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek were approaching Sheklung, 60 miles northwest of Hong Kong—driving the Japanese before them—according to a Chungking communique.

Singapore Fall Seen As 'Terrible Blow'

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The imminent fall of Singapore was described in military quarters here today as a blow of terrible consequences for the Allies — a disaster which would add at least an extra year to a long Pacific war.

It makes a successful defense of the Dutch East Indies highly problematical, according to this informed opinion, and probably means that the united nations must fall back eventually on Australia as their main bastion between Hawaii and India.

Moreover, all the strategic advantages lost—whether at Singapore or other key points, fallen or yet to fall—must be bought back some day slowly and painfully at great cost in blood and treasure.

The present grim situation might well have been averted, it was learned, had the Singapore garrison been able to hurl back all attacks on the fortress island for just about another month. By that time, it was understood, the British bastion probably would have received ample reinforcements to hold out indefinitely.

Claim Success In Counter Attack

LONDON—(INS)—"Some measure of success" in British counter-attacks against overwhelmingly superior Japanese forces on Singapore island was reported by an official military commentator today although officials admitted the situation was still extremely critical.

Contrary to Japanese claims, it was asserted the Causeway linking Singapore island with Malaya has not been repaired, but the enemy is still landing reinforcements by sea.

At 12:30 p. m. (7:30 a. m. EWT) general indications in London were that the Japanese were being pushed back toward the Sungei river.

Another counter-attack was believed to have been launched between Sungei Mandi and Sungei Kranji. (Editor's note: Sungei is the native name for river.)

"While the situation is undoubtedly most serious," the commentator said, "it has not deteriorated in any way since Tuesday."

Against this British picture, an unconfirmed report originating from Tokyo claimed that the invaders had penetrated the western section of Singapore city itself.

British military authorities on the basis of latest information from the Singapore fortress made no effort to conceal the gravity of the situation.

Dutch Break Up Jap Bomber Formation

BATAVIA—(INS)—A formation of Japanese bombers on their way to attack Surabaya was intercepted and broken up by Netherlands Indies fighters and failed to reach its objective, the N. E. I. high command announced today.

Meanwhile, new Japanese landings in preparation for a major assault on Java were reported at Balangnipa and Djeneponto on the island of Celebes. These followed a major landing at Macassar yesterday.

One Japanese company advancing on Maro in the Celebes was attacked by Dutch forces and suffered losses, it was announced.

Fak Fak, on the southwest coast of New Guinea was machine-gunned by enemy planes but little damage was done.

Nazis Stiffen Stand On Red Front

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies, thrown back nearly 200 miles in some sectors, were reported "definitely stiffening" their resistance today as the paralyzing grip of winter abated and fighting increased in violence along the entire 1,200-mile front.

London military quarters said the Germans now were making a determined stand.

Official Soviet dispatches, however, declared the Red armies were continuing to advance, capturing a number of villages and German fortifications on the southwest (Ukraine) front.

For the second successive day, Hitler's high command cited new Russian attempts to break out of Leningrad, and declared they had been repulsed.

On the north African front, a German communique reported "strong enemy reconnaissance forces were thrown back," while British headquarters reported no change in the general situation.

The absence of detail recently has been explained by a declaration that invasion communication lines are disrupted and Adolf Hitler's high command might profit from information immediately divulged.

Discuss Moves to Force Butler Hearing

To guard against what they termed "intimidation" of school board members by supporters of School Superintendent Willard S. Weekley, a group of 150 Butlerites last night gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burnette Llewellyn to discuss their plans for pressing for a hearing of "misconduct" charges filed by 11 Butler and Worthington township residents against the superintendent. The picture at the top shows part of the group shortly after they had elected Bert Hess, one of the 11 complaintants, their spokesman. Below is little Tommy Llewellyn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn, who watched the proceedings from the sidelines. It was long after midnight, when the group had gone home, that Tommy, a little sleepy-eyed, went off to bed.

been in charge of the institution's poultry farm. Eager to settle down on a farm, he welcomed the opportunity to take over, on shares, a 120-acre farm five miles from Mansfield, on the way to Lucas.

Bad luck hit him within a few months. Last Dec. 31, he was pinned when the tractor he was operating overturned. Examination showed his back was broken. After several weeks at General hospital, he was taken back to the farm where he continued its active direction from his bed.

On Jan. 21 Wilson obtained his parole. The fact that his case came up for consideration after he served one year of his term shows that his behavior was good, that there were no black marks against him at the reformatory. Formerly of New Boston, he had attended Ohio University for three years.

His sponsor, who assured reformatory officials that he had a job for Wilson, was S. A. Foltz, owner of the farm. On the same day that he left the reformatory, Wilson started working at the farm under Harris' supervision.

Only a week later, Harris told a reporter, Wilson left for a day and returned in drunken condition and fighting mood.

"But although that was breaking his parole," Harris said in his weary voice, "I never scolded him or said a word to him about it. I thought that if I was reasonable with him, he'd play ball with me in the future.

"He had been fine for the first week, but after that it was different. His room was right above mine, and all night he kept pacing up and down, up and down. From the way he acted, and from things he said to Miss Chamberlain, I knew he was planning to go 'over the hill'."

Harris' frequent use of this expression is a throw-back to his years as a guard at the reformatory. It is prison parlance for making an escape.

Miss Zola Chamberlain, housekeeper at the farm home, said that Wilson told her only a few hours before the shooting that he was going to ask Harris to fire him, so that he wouldn't be violating parole regulations by leaving voluntarily.

"Then Monday afternoon," Harris said, "Wilson went up to his room and got all his things. When he came down the stairs I called to him, and told him to come in my room. I told him he shouldn't leave. I warned him. He saw my gun and everything, but didn't pay any attention."

Harris emphasized that he felt responsible for Wilson, and that he told him he should not leave without obtaining his permission.

Harris has a daughter, Jean, 14, who was in school at the time of the shooting.

the Feb. 3 meeting had not been seen before the meeting by most of the councilmen. Council will, in the future, attempt to enforce the deadline, Shultz said.

With eight of the nine councilmen present at last night's session, it was agreed that the city should pay half the $120 monthly salary of Mrs. Verla Becker who was named recently by Mansfield Community Fund officials to investigate indigent cases referred to the Community Fund office. Councilman Fred Miller, Democratic member from the Fifth Ward, was unable to attend the caucus.

Councilmen agreed that an investigator should be employed to relieve Traffic Commissioner Frend C. Boals of that work. He investigated indigent cases before he was named commissioner.

Council discussed but reached no decision on the proposed ordinance which Mansfield Gasoline Retail association members are seeking to establish filling station closing hours at 7 p. m., week days and 1 p. m., Sundays. Shultz said the matter will be considered at another caucus probably early next week.

Also before council for discussion last night was the application of Mansfield General hospital for an increased from $4.25 to $4.75 in the daily rate for the care of indigents. The city signs a contract annually with the hospital for the care of such cases. The question also is scheduled for further study at the next caucus.

BUTLER SCHOOL ANTI-WEEKLEY FORCES RALLY

Decide To Press For Hearing of 'Misconduct' Charges, Hit 'Intimidation.'

themselves as "anti-Weekleyites" and said they were determined to see that charges filed against the superintendent by 11 Butler and Worthington township residents were not "white-washed" by the board.

Bert Hess, one of the 11 who brought the charges against the superintendent, acted as spokesmen for the group which gathered at the home of Burnette Llewellyn, anothr signer of the affidavit.

Hess said the group he reprelyn, another signer of the affidavit, in its action suspending Weekley pending hearing of the charges and that they were opposed to a recurrence of "acts of intimidation" such as took place at the courthouse Monday.

"I refer to the action taken by Weekley supporters in detaining school board members (at the courthouse) until they had agreed to try to withdraw the charges against Mr. Weekley," he declared.

"This group never meddled into the school situation until it became necessary for someone to correct the unnecessary and unpleasant situation we're confronted with.

"We are opposed to mob violence and mistreatment of board members such as occurred here last Friday which resulted in our school being close until after Mr. Weekley was reinstated."

Hess said the group was of the opinion that the board, elected by a majority of voters in the school district, should not be "dictated to by a minority."

"The election of these men should be sufficient evidence that residents of the school district have confidence that they will make equitable decision without mob rule," he added.

The group stated they contemplated an early hearing on the charges and until such time as the hearing was held by the school board, it would act to guard against intimidation of its members.

Earlier the group called at the home of Board Member Rupert Roberts, beaten during last Friday's demonstration at the school, when they learned that two school teachers had gone to see him.

The teachers, Foster Laribee and Walter McAuley, called on Roberts, they said, to inform him that a private meeting the teachers had scheduled with the board had been postponed.

Kinsey Morgan, the other board member beaten by adults last week, and Walter Wareham, later appeared on the scene. The citizens group informed the members they intended to attend future sessions of the board. The other two members, Ivan Gower, president, and Wade Forbes were not present.

Last night's meeting came on the heels of a board meeting Monday in Mansfield during which the board, consenting to the demand of another group of 200 who followed them to the courthouse, voted to lift Weekley's suspension pending hearing of the charges.

Winbigler Scores In Last 20 Seconds to Beat Ashland

by REX HESS

Says Spiv Harris in the Mt. Vernon News:

"Sunday's Mansfield News-Journal sport page carried a banner headline: TYGERS DEFEAT MIGHTY MT. VERNON TEAM. . . . Wonder if Rex Hess was just trying to make the Tygers' victory look extra good. . . . None of the fans around here are calling the Jackets 'mighty' (although I have heard some comments about their performances being mighty lousy Saturday night.)"

Spiv, my boy, is it possible you can talk that way about your boys and still stay in town?

I can remember when the Mt. Vernon boys darn near ran you and me both out of town because we merely gave the opposing teams credit for winning. Remember?

"Crazy Knox" can't be the same as in days of old.

And remember that yell we used to give at tournaments and debates and things?

Knox, Knox, Crazy Knox,
K——N——O——X
We want more rye.
Yeah, Mt. Vernon.

Mt. Vernon and North Central Ohio league fans may have had the low-down on the Jackets this long time, but none of the N. C. O. papers have even hinted that the Mt. Vernon quintet was so (shall we use that awful word again?) "mighty lousy."

When the Jackets started out losing several games by one point, the papers regarded it as merely a tough break. And when Mt. Vernon went through the first round of play in the N. C. O. without a defeat, the papers gave the Jackets all the credit in the world for being as good as they were.

So all I know is what I read in the papers.

And now that Mt. Vernon has lost one N. C. O. game, to Marion, and is still tied for the league lead, I find the Ashland Times-Gazette saying on Monday that Ashland plays two of its toughest games of the season this week, against Mansfield and Mt. Vernon.

You haven't been fooling Bill McKee too, have you Spiv?

Here's the secret, don't hold your breath.
Those p'ar li'l Jackets were scared to death.

It isn't Coach Harry Mehock of Johnny Appleseed after all. It's Coach Joseph Thoms, one of the Appleseed faculty members, transferred to the job of giving the Cline avenue youth setting up exercises and instructions in running and jumping when the track season comes around.

That's the information passed along by Virginia Palmer who owns the sweet voice on the Appleseed office end of the telephone. She intimates she is growing weary of chasing all over Appleseed looking for the little Mehock who isn't there, when people call for Coach Mehock.

And here Supt. Larry Miller told me he was going to give Mehock the job and "put him to work." Sorry, Virginia, I didn't mean to put you to work.

Lutherans Defeat Bee Gees

High Scoring Forward Leads Lutheran Victory.

(By Associated Press)

THE marksmanship of Earl Fisher, Wittenberg forward, stood out today as the feature of four Ohio conference basketball games last night.

Fisher scored 12 baskets and four free throws for 28 points as the Lutherans edged Bowling Green, 46 to 45. Three of his tallies decided the game in the last two minutes.

The Wittenberg forward knotted the count at 45-all with a fielder and was fouled by Clarence Fox, Bee Gee forward. Fisher then made good the free throw for the visitors' margin of victory.

Ohio Northern won another one-point victory from Heidelberg at Tiffin, 51 to 50. The Student Princes overcame Northern's 29-19 halftime lead in the second half only to wilt under the Polar Bears' spurt as the game waned.

Mount Union defeated Kent State, 47 to 41, at Alliance to break its tie with Baldwin Wallace near the top of the conference standings but Wooster, which was idle, continued in the lead. In the other league contest at New Concord, Muskingum defeated Marietta, 58 to 46.

Ohio university took an overtime thriller from Youngstown, 42 to 40, at Athens. It was anybody's game until forward John Pawlen of Youngstown locked the count at 36-all with a basket from mid-floor. The score was tied again at 40-all in the five-minute overtime until Bill Ross, Bobcat guard, sank a long one 10 second before play ended to give Ohio U. the game. Absent from the Youngstown lineup was highscoring Leo Mogus, ill with the flu.

Ohio Wesleyan's Bishops entertained their Denison rivals of long standing to their sorrow. The Granville lads employed a figure eight screen attack that kept the Bishops at least seven points behind most of the game and won, 48 to 37.

At Dayton the Flyers knocked off Miami, 60 to 42, to avenge an earlier defeat. Dayton piled up a 34-16 halftime lead and virtually coasted the rest of the way.

In other games, Western Reserve defeated John Carroll, 57 to 46, at Cleveland; visiting Thiel of Greenville, Pa., downed Hiram, 57 to 32, and Wayne of Detroit beat Cincinnati, 51 to 43, at Cincinnati.

Ohio State Loop Organizes But Braves Not Represented

The Ohio State baseball league organized for the 1942 season last night at Tiffin, but whether Mansfield is still a member of the league is a question even owners of the Mansfield Braves couldn't answer today.

The United Press said "representatives of Findlay, Fostoria, Fremont, Mansfield, Lima and Tiffin, declared their intention to enter clubs in the class D circuit for a schedule opening May 6 and closing Sept. 4."

* * *

Who represented Mansfield was a puzzle today to Dr. Frank Maxwell, one of the three owners of the Braves. Dr. Maxwell knows he didn't attend the meeting. George Satterlee, president of the Braves, has been out of town since last Thursday, and at his home it was stated definitely that he had no intention of attending the session. And the other owner, Bill Mead, also had no intention of going to Tiffin last night, according to Maxwell. Mead was in Ashland today and could not be reached.

Joe Donnelly was re-elected league president at the Tiffin meeting. Grover Hartley of Findlay was named vice president, and Marvin White of Fremont, secretary.

The league adopted the Shaughnessy post-season playoff system to replace the split season playoff plan in effect the past few weeks.

President Joe Donnelly, of Columbus, expects the age average of players in the loop to be reduced from last season's 20 years to around 18 because of the war's manpower demands but does not anticipate any difficulty in manning the six teams.

He said chances were "favorable" for each of the six clubs to start the season with Major league hookups as a source of player talent.

* * *

The league laid down no requirements on the playing of twilight or night games. The question of how many of each type should be played was left to the judgment of the individual clubs.

The directors will meet March 1 to approve a schedule.

McMullen-Warner Team Rolls Top

Mary McMullen and Pop Warner took top honors in the mixed doubles bowling league at Colony alleys last night with a 1035 total on the board, and 1095 including handicap.

Mary had high total for women of 527, and Frost led the men with 545.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT BOWEL WORMS

The signs are misleading. Nobody is sure to escape. Worms can make real trouble.

Anybody, anywhere, can "catch" roundworms! So watch out for these signs in your child or yourself: uneasy stomach, nose-picking, loss of weight, itchy seat, nervousness.

Get Jayne's Vermifuge if you even suspect roundworms. It expels stubborn worms, yet acts very gently. If there are no worms, it works just as a mild laxative. Jayne's is America's best known proprietary worm medicine; scientifically tested and used by millions for over a century. So, play safe! Insist on Jayne's Vermifuge.

Thriller Taken By Battling Tyger Quint

Ashland Reserves Lose First Game of Season In Overtime

By REX HESS, News-Journal Sports Editor.

MANSFIELD'S TYGERS, big and little, treated high school cage fans to an evening of thrills last night at Senior high gym as they edged Ashland 35-33 in the last 20 seconds of the big game after the reserves had copped the preliminary 25-23 in an overtime period.

And the crowd was in an uproar all night long. It wasn't as big a crowd as it should have been for the thrillers put on display, but since Mansfield had defeated Ashland at Ashland, fans had no reason to suspect last night's game would be even close.

Now they face a tough weekend trip which takes them to Hamilton Friday night and Springfield Saturday.

Paced by Stentz's sensational set shots from the corner, Ashland wasn't a bit awed by the fast stepping Tygers, and the A's battled their way to a 9-8 lead in the first quarter.

But the Tygers came back for a 22-17 lead at the half, and were still ahead 32-26 at the third quarter. Then they didn't score again until there was only two minutes to go, and the A's were leading 33-32. Dean Hahn tied it up with a free shot.

And then, with 20 seconds of regular playing time remaining, Bob Winbigler hooped a one-hander from the circle, and it was all over.

Windy chalked up 16 points to bring his season's total to 203, but of all the buckets he's scored this year, none have been as important as that shot he plunked in the hoop in that last 20 seconds.

A minute and a half went by before Ken Krupp opened the scoring with a long shot. Schull tallied under the hoop for Ashland. Winbigler made the second of a pair of free tosses. Bartley scored under the basket and the A's were ahead 4-3.

Jacobs missed a free shot. Dietzel tied it up with a free shot, and Winbigler made a pair of free tosses. Jacobs missed another free shot. Stentz looped a long shot from the corner. Winbigler scored under the bucket and Stentz tallied once more from the corner. Winbigler missed a free toss and Semple made one giving Ashland a 9-8 lead at the quarter.

Stentz again scored from the corner and Bartley made the second of a pair of free shots to make it 12-8. Joe Altamonte caged a long shot from the side. Stentz got a follow shot and Bartley missed a free throw. Winbigler hooped a one-hander from the circle. Joe Romano missed a free toss. Bartley got a free point.

Paul Dietzel scored under the hoop and then missed a free throw. Stentz once more connected on a long shot from the side, making it Ashland 17, Mansfield 14.

Then the fireworks started. Winbigler got a pair of free points, and then added a bucket on a fast break. Krupp sank a long shot from the side and Dietzel scored on a pivot to make it 22-17. Dietzel missed a free shot before the half ended.

Jacobs got a free point. Dietzel made the first of a pair of free shots. Stentz fouled out and Winbigler made the second of two free tosses. Tucker, who replaced Stentz, missed two free tosses. Winbigler got a one-hander from the circle and Romano scored under the basket to make it 28-18.

Jacobs got a follow shot and then scored again under the hoop. Hahn got a sucker shot on some brilliant passwork under the basket. Schull scored from the circle. Hahn tallied under the bucket. Jacobs looped a shot from the corner as the quarter horn honked, making it 32-26.

Then Ashland got going. Bartley got a free point and then tallied on an under-bucket pivot. Dietzel fouled out and Bartley made a pair of free shots. It was 32-31 for Mansfield with five minutes and 30 seconds remaining.

Jacobs scored from the side to put Ashland ahead with two minutes and 45 seconds to go. Fifteen seconds later Schull fouled out and Hahn made the second of a pair of free throws to tie the score. With two minutes to go, Winbigler missed a pair of free chances. Then came Windy's game winning bucket.

Coach Vere Smith's reserves handed the Ashland reserves their first defeat of the season in the prelim. Mansfield got away to a 6-2 start in the first quarter and boosted it to 13-3 at the half. Ashland cut it to 20-13 at the third quarter, and then steadily came on to tie the score at 22-22 in regulation time. Flick Flockenzier's long shot won the game in overtime.

Mild Mannered Mel Expected To Carry On In Quiet Style

MELL OTT

By MORTIMER KREEGER

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—Mel Ott learned his baseball under fiery John McGraw and hard-boiled, driving Bill Terry but the new manager of the New York Giants probably will continue to be the same mild-mannered Mel.

Ott won't say.

"I don't know just how I'll handle things," he explained. "I learned plenty from both McGraw and Terry. I have a few ideas of my own but I can't say what I'll do until I get the chance." That's typical of Mel, who never speaks about what he's going to do nor of what he has done.

It's unlikely, though, that a quiet chap like Mel will turn into a martinent overnight. He figures there are other ways to handle men and get the most out of them besides being tough and brusque. Mel hasn't been slow about telling umpires and players what he thinks about their decisions and actions, but he has done it in such a way that they haven't been "shown up" before the grandstand customers.

It's been 16 years since Ott, one of baseball's first "boy wonders," joined the Giants. Fact is, he was told to report a year before he did but he thought he was being kidded, and didn't.

Ott was a high school catcher and went with his battery mate when Pitcher Lester Rouprich signed with New Orleans in 1925. The late A. J. Heinemann, then New Orleans owner, decided Ott was too young. He arranged for Mel to play with a semi-pro team at Patterson, La., maintained by Harry P. Williams, millionaire industrialist and sportsman killed a few years ago in a plane crash.

In less than two weeks Heinemann had heard enough about Ott to offer him a contract but, says Ott, "Mr. Harry told me not to sign because he had other things in mind for me."

That summer Williams told his friend McGraw about Mel and the Giant's manager agreed to look him over. Williams sent Ott a postcard telling him to report but Mel explains that "I thought it was a joke and didn't go."

When Williams returned from Europe he sent Mel to McGraw with a letter of recommendation.

"Was I scared when I walked into McGraw's office!" says Mel. "I'd never been more than 100 miles from home, never outside Louisiana."

Mel recalled that McGraw looked puzzled when he identified himself as a "baseball player" Ott's explanation that "Mr. Williams talked to you about me" didn't help, either.

"Who's Mr. Williams?" demanded McGraw.

As Mel tried to explain, McGraw saw a letter in Ott's trembling hand and reached for it to read Williams' recommendation.

The 16-year-old Ott was given a three weeks' trial and then McGraw, satisfied that he was a prospect, sent him home with orders to report at training camp the next spring.

It wasn't long before McGraw was telling the sports writers about Ott's perfect batting style. McGraw paid Ott $500 for signing a contract and sent $1,000 to Williams, who promptly endorsed the check over to Ott.

Because Mel weighed only 160, McGraw decided to convert him into an outfielder and sent him out to compete with such veterans as "Irish" Meusel, "Pep" Young and Billy Southworth. When McGraw asked the 17-year-old Mel whether he'd ever played outfield Ott gave him a laugh by replying "Sure, when I was a kid."

Veterans in those days weren't anxious to help youngsters come along and take their jobs. Rookies usually went through plenty of hazing. But Mel was so modest and naive that the oldsters soon were giving him pointers and help.

Ott struck out his first two times at bat—as a pinch hitter. It wasn't until August that Ott was given a regular outfield spot—on August 21, in a shake-up. Ott went to the outfield and Bell Terry to first base.

The National league's home run ace—415 round-trippers—showed no early signs of being a slugger. It wasn't until 1928 that he hit a ball out of the park.

In 1929 Mel hit 42 homers and drove in 151 runs, his best record. The next year he had his highest batting average, .349, became old enough to sign his own contracts, and married Mildred Wattigny of New Orleans—who had been surprised to know anyone could make enough money playing baseball to live on. They have two daughters.

In that 1930 season Mel had one of his two greatest baseball thrills. He hit three homers and a double in one game. In the 1933 World series he hit homers his first and last trips to the plate, winning the game and the series with his last blow.

Ott well remembers McGraw's fiery methods. "He didn't mind errors. He knew they were all in the game. But he couldn't stand mental lapses. After a pitcher had hurled a no-hit game, McGraw, stingy with compliments, told him: "With me telling you what to pitch you ought to have some more like that.'"

Ott and Carl Hubbell, the only McGraw boys still active, are the darlings of the Polo grounds. Ott believes Hubbell will have a good year, but Mel won't say anything about his team's pennant chances. He has made several trades since he was named boss, getting Johnny Mize from the Cards, Bill Werber from the Reds and Hank Lieber from the Cubs.

BEAUFORD GLOVER LOSES AT TOLEDO

Lem Franklin, Cleveland heavyweight, knocked out Al Reiss of Detroit in two minutes and five seconds of the first round in the main bout.

Eyes College Heavy Crown

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Big "Peg" Kendrick, who has beaten two national collegiate boxing champions although the title itself has eluded him, is ready to make his hardest try at the crown this spring before accepting a commission in the Army reserve corps.

The Louisiana State University heavyweight will have the advantage of fighting in his home lot, for the tourney will be held here late in March.

Peg has lost only two of his 18 college fights. In 1940 Nick Lee of Wisconsin, over whom Kendrick had won a decision, beat him in the finals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association tourney. In 1941 Peg lost in the semi-finals to Gates Kinbrell of North Carolina, who was then beaten by Louie Campbell of Southwestern Louisiana. Peg had kayoed Campbell during the season.

His coach, Ed Khoury, former L. S. U. boxer and football captain, believes this is Peg's year. In fact, he thinks Peg could beat Joe Louis with a year of professional experience—or so he says in his more enthusiastic moments.

"All Peg has to learn to beat Louis," he declared, "is the fine points of infighting and how to gauge his speed over a 15-round route.

* * *

"He's as good now as Louis was when he was an amateur. Right now Peg could knock Buddy Baer out in two rounds. He's too fast for those big fellows. He's faster than Louis and can punch with any man."

Kendrick thinks otherwise.

"I'm not interested in a professional career," he says. "I'm not a professional fighter."

Peg, who now weighs 212, started boxing at 145 when at Homer, La., high school and had 38 bouts before graduating. He's won about half his 56 high school and college fights by knockouts.

An R. O. T. C. student, he'll become Second Lieutenant Herbert Kendrick in May and expects a call to active duty shortly thereafter.

PITCHER SIGNS

CINCINNATI—(INS)—Jim Turner, veteran pitcher from Nashville, Tenn., today signed his 1942 contract with the Cincinnati Reds.

CHAPTER XXXI

Linda laughed, unamused. "He's not afraid of me. Challenger and I understand each other. We're very much alike in many ways."

"If you mean each of you symbolize a certain type of beauty, I suppose that's true."

Linda, glancing stealthily at Steve's profile, saw he was grimly in earnest, although his eyes remained fixed on the road ahead.

"You're very gallant," she retorted, "but that's hardly what I had in mind. Challenger needs love, patience and a little understanding. He was wild and untrained, but now—"

"Then I fell down on my job." Steve's voice rose as they urged their horses into a canter. "Perhaps if I'd been more patient, more understanding, you would have learned to love me."

"What?" Linda could not believe her ears. Surely fate was playing another trick on her imagination. Unconsciously her heels dug into Challenger's sensative sides; her hands relaxed their grip on the reins.

"When you went back to Prairievale," Steve was saying stonily, "I thought you understood how I felt—that I loved you and wanted you to be my wife. I—I'd loved you for so long, but when I saw that it was Greg you really wanted—"

"But—Brenda—you were together so much—"

"Brenda!" Steve laughed bitterly. "Now that you're leaving, now that everything is settled between us, you might as well know there was nothing between Brenda and me. Oh' I'll admit she tried desperately to—well, rearrange my life. But I told her that everything was over for good. When she's had her little fling, I expect she'll be glad to come back to Jerry and remain faithful to him the rest of her life."

"I thought if you believed I was interested in Brenda, you'd feel free to make your own decisions, but stay with me because you believed it your duty, so I—" Suddenly Steve broke off, his face whitening. "Linda!" he shouted. "The jump!"

There was a blur of black gliding through the air as the horse took a sagging fence. Linda had taken that jump many times before, but now, oblivious of everything save Steve's agonized face and his low, bitter confession, she was off-guard.

As Challenger took the fence, Linda's slim body hurtled from the horse. There was another cry from Steve, a gasp from Linda as the strangely-still figure.

Up ahead, Greg was accusing Diane, his face sullen. "You planned this," he said wrathfully. "You knew Steve was out here and you threw Linda at him, trying to get them to patch things up. Why?"

Diane looked away. "I think everyone deserves one break," she insisted. "If I'm wrong about—things, I'll be the first to admit it, but I can't forget that Linda and Steve—"

Steve's cry reached them then, and Diane checked her horse instantly. "That was Steve," she said tensely. "Something—something has gone wrong back there!"

Without another word the couple wheeled their horses and galloped back to the jump, just as Steve, his face ashen, bent and carefully lifted Linda's crumpled, unconscious figure. He whispered, agonizedly, "Linda, my dearest darling, I've killed you!"

The nearest hospital was an hour's drive from Hillsacres, and while Greg piloted his car down the road like a veritable demon, Steven knelt in the back of the car over Linda's unconscious figure. Over and over again he reproached himself, Diane, who had no idea that Steve had confessed his love to Linda, said nothing to relieve his mental suffering.

Diane urged Greg to hurry faster and faster until the car approached the hospital, when she broke into sobs of relief.

"She'll be all right," Diane was saying as internes bore Linda away on a stretcher. "I know she'll be all right."

Waiting in the lounge for news, the trio was strangely quiet. Hunched in a chair, Steve stared at an unopened magazine. Greg paced back and forth across the room, smoking one cigaret after another. Diane tried unsuccessfully to keep from thinking of that brightly-lighted operating room where Linda was under observation.

At last a nurse appeared, and the three sprung up. Steve implored her for news. Diane held her breath.

"Mrs. Baridon is feeling much better now," the nurse said smiling. "It was a slight concussion, but she'll be all right after a day or two in bed."

"Thank God," Steve said, turning away to hide tears of relief that streamed down his face.

"Then—it isn't serious?" Diane wanted reassurance. Linda had been so still. So white—

"Absolutely not. She'll be just fine."

Another nurse appeared then, smiling first at Steve and then at Greg. "Mrs. Baridon is asking for her husband, please."

Steve started forward, dazed by this surprising information, unable to believe his own ears. "But—that's me," he said hesitantly. "She—she wouldn't want to see me."

"No, of course not," Greg blustered, but without conviction. "You must be mistaken. I'm the one she wants."

The pretty nurse was obviously confused. The idea of two handsome young men fighting for the attention of her patient was almost too much.

"Mrs. Baridon is asking for Mr. Baridon." She was slightly nettled. "If you're both named Baridon—"

Triumphantly, Diane shoved Steve toward the door. "Go on, you big goof," she ordered happily. "It's you Linda wants, and you're going if I have to drag you there."

After Steve had followed the nurse into the wide corridor, Diane turned to Greg. The meeting between Steve and Linda she had so carefully planned had been carried out, although it had nearly ended in disaster. Her work was done. Any tenderness her eyes might have contained as they rested on Steve was gone now.

"Well Greg," she said in a voice that was cool and cynical, "that's the last curtain. Shall we go?"

Dull-eyed he stared at her. "Then—Linda doesn't intend to—to marry me? It's Steve, after all?"

Diane felt a surge of pity for Greg. After all, it was hard for the man to realize he had been only a pawn in a game too big for him to understand. She knew with certainty that Greg had learned his lesson. Never again would he be the insolent, audacious playboy, but a sadder, wiser man.

"Yes," she answered, "it has always been Steve for Linda, but neither of them realized that until it was nearly too late." Shivering a little as she remembered how near Linda had come to never revealing the truth, Diane glanced up at Greg, admiring his courage despite the fact that his weak, handsome face was set in lines of suffering.

"Cheer up, Greg," she said. "It's just like a story-book romance. Boy meets girl. Boy loses girl. Boy gets girl, and there are two people left on the outside looking in." She put her hand through his arm in a gesture of companionship. "Shall we go?"

Slowly, silently, they turned and walked down the wide stone steps from the hospital to face the bright autumn sunshine. Here, Diane knew, an understanding world awaited. Here, together, they would find solace.

Meanwhile, Steve followed the pretty nurse through the long hospital corridors, unaware of the comments of passing nurses as they stared after the handsome, sober-faced man in immaculate, well-fitting riding togs. Steve's thoughts were chaotic. Even now it was hard for him to understand that he, not Greg, had been summoned.

The nurse paused outside a closed door, suddenly aware that this was no ordinary meeting between husband and wife, but something too precious to be spoiled by the presence of a stranger.

"Mrs. Baridon is in this room," she said. "I'll wait out here."

For a moment Steve hesitated, his heart pounding. Then, resolutely, he opened the door and entered the room where Linda was waiting. For a moment she did not see him, and Steve felt a lump in his throat at sight of the tiny figure in the bed. There were bandages over her forehead and her eyes were closed.

Steven moved nearer, until he was standing at her side. Then Linda's eyes opened slowly—slowly until she saw him.

"Steve, dear," she whispered happily, her arms reaching up to him. With a sob Steve sank to his knees beside her. Tenderly, hungrily he pressed her against him.

"Oh, my dearest," he whispered brokenly, "I thought I had killed you."

"And would that have meant so much to you?" she asked, her eyes like stars, now that misunderstanding had been forgotten. She felt a swift thrill of happiness as his arms tightened around her.

"How can you ask me that when I love you so much?" he demanded huskily. "Linda—am I dreaming, or is this really you? I've wanted to hold you like this for so long."

"And I've wanted you, too," she answered. Gravely she told him the entire story, sparing no detail in her confession until she reached the point where she had returned from Prairievale to find Steve lunching with Brenda.

At that point she felt his arms tighten around her and she finished softly. "So I decided that I had been wrong—that I had misunderstood what you said when I went away. I—I didn't want you to feel you were tied to me, Steve. That was why I pretended I was dissatisfied when all the time—" She could not finish, but listened with glowing eyes while Steve explained.

"I told you the truth about being unable to meet your train," he said, "and I did meet Brenda although now I suspect she had a great deal to do with that. She asked me to take her to lunch, and naturally I had to agree. She—she told me a great many things about you that I never would have believed under ordinary circumstances, but when I came home and found you telephoning Greg, all the things she had said came back to me. I was half crazy with jealousy. From then on—"

"From then on, each of us misunderstood everything the other did," Linda murmured gently. "Oh, Steve, how foolish we've been. Think how much we've missed by our blindness!"

"We shared a great many things in the past," Steve whispered as he bent to kiss her soft lips. "Now we can begin to live for the future."

After a long time they drew apart, and Linda gazed shaken, into Steve's eyes.

For them it was a magic moment, when misunderstanding and doubt were cleared away by a simple caress. Linda made a gesture of helplessness. "I was thinking of Diane, Steve. She's done so much for us—bringing us together again. I want her to find happiness."

"I think she will, my darling," he assured her gently. "Diane pretends to be hard, but her heart is made of gold. She'll be all right."

Again they were silent.

"You'll be a very rich young lady, Mrs. Baridon," Steve whispered gravely, "and a very popular one now that our book is going to be a moving picture. Will a honeymoon in Hollywood answer the purpose?"

"Hollywood?" Linda was surprised. "Then, you aren't taking your horses south?"

Steve shook his head. "Of course not. Dad takes them every year. What made you think I was going? I'm to be a consultant on the new picture."

For Linda the last vestige of doubt had been swept away by that simple declaration. Brenda was forgotten now, a vague, shadowy figure of her past that could never touch Linda's newly-found happiness. Linda realized she had taken Brenda's planned trip to Saratoga as evidence that Steve would be there too.

Now she drew Steve's head down to the pillow beside her own.

"I'd love a honeymoon in Hollywood," she assured him, "but only on one condition."

"And that?" he urged.

"That after the picture is finished, we can go home—to Hillsacres."

Slowly Steve turned his head until his lips touched hers in a kiss that held a promise of the happy future they would share.

"Hillsacres it is, darling," he whispered. "Together."

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Says Spiv Harris in the Mt. Vernon News:

"Sunday's Mansfield News-Journal sport page carried a banner headline: TYGERS DEFEAT MIGHTY MT. VERNON TEAM. . . . Wonder if Rex Hess was just trying to make the Tygers' victory look extra good. . . . None of the fans around here are calling the Jackets 'mighty' (although I have heard some comments about their performances being mighty lousy Saturday night.)"

Spiv, my boy, is it possible you can talk that way about your boys and still stay in town?

I can remember when the Mt. Vernon boys darn near ran you and me both out of town because we merely gave the opposing teams credit for winning. Remember?

"Crazy Knox" can't be the same as in days of old.

And remember that yell we used to give at tournaments and debates and things?

Knox, Knox, Crazy Knox,
K——N——O——X
We want more rye.
Yeah, Mt. Vernon.

Mt. Vernon and North Central Ohio league fans may have had the low-down on the Jackets this long time, but none of the N. C. O. papers have even hinted that the Mt. Vernon quintet was so (shall we use that awful word again?) "mighty lousy."

When the Jackets started out losing several games by one point, the papers regarded it as merely a tough break. And when Mt. Vernon went through the first round of play in the N. C. O. without a defeat, the papers gave the Jackets all the credit in the world for being as good as they were.

So all I know is what I read in the papers.

And now that Mt. Vernon has lost one N. C. O. game, to Marion, and is still tied for the league lead, I find the Ashland Times-Gazette saying on Monday that Ashland plays two of its toughest games of the season this week, against Mansfield and Mt. Vernon.

You haven't been fooling Bill McKee too, have you Spiv?

Here's the secret, don't hold your breath,
These d'or El Jackets were scared to death.

It isn't Coach Harry Mehock of Johnny Appleseed after all. It's Coach Joseph Thoms, one of the Appleseed faculty members, transferred to the job of giving the Cline avenue youth setting up exercises and instructions in running and jumping when the track season comes around.

That's the information passed along by Virginia Palmer who owns the sweet voice on the Appleseed office end of the telephone. She intimates she is growing weary of chasing all over Appleseed looking for the little Mehock who isn't there, when people call for Coach Mehock.

And here Supt. Larry Miller told me he was going to give Mehock the job, and "put him to work." Sorry, Virginia. I didn't mean to put you to work.

Lutherans Defeat Bee Gees

High Scoring Forward Leads Lutheran Victory.

(By Associated Press)

THE marksmanship of Earl Fisher, Wittenberg forward, stood out today as the feature of four Ohio conference basketball games last night.

Fisher scored 12 baskets and four free throws for 28 points as the Lutherans edged Bowling Green, 46 to 45. Three of his tallies decided the game in the last two minutes.

The Wittenberg forward knotted the count at 45-all with a fielder and was fouled by Clarence Fox, Bee Gee forward. Fisher then made good the free throw for the visitors' margin of victory.

Ohio Northern won another one-point victory from Heidelberg at Tiffin, 51 to 50. The Student Princes overcame Northern's 29-19 halftime lead in the second half only to wilt under the Polar Bears' spurt as the game waned.

Mount Union defeated Kent State, 47 to 41, at Alliance to break its tie with Baldwin Wallace near the top of the conference standings but Wooster, which was idle, continued in the lead. In the other league contest at New Concord, Muskingum defeated Marietta, 58 to 46.

Ohio university took an overtime thriller from Youngstown, 42 to 40, at Athens. It was anybody's game until forward John Pawlen of Youngstown locked the count at 36-all with a basket from mid-floor. The score was tied again at 40-all in the five-minute overtime until Bill Ross, Bobcat guard, sank a long one 10 second before play ended to give Ohio U. the game. Absent from the Youngstown lineup was highscoring Leo Mogus, ill with the flu.

Ohio Wesleyan's Bishops entertained their Denison rivals of long standing to their sorrow. The Granville lads employed a figure eight screen attack that kept the Bishops at least seven points behind most of the game and won, 48 to 37.

At Dayton the Flyers knocked off Miami, 60 to 42, to avenge an earlier defeat. Dayton piled up a 34-16 halftime lead and virtually coasted the rest of the way.

In other games, Western Reserve defeated John Carroll, 57 to 46, at Cleveland; visiting Thiel of Greenville, Pa., downed Hiram, 57 to 32, and Wayne of Detroit beat Cincinnati, 51 to 43, at Cincinnati.

Haire Sets Pace In Transportation

K. Haire paced the Transportation league bowlers at Colony alleys last night with a 613 total on games of 190-202-221, while Bosh and Teal tied for high game with 235.

Globe Steel rolled high total of 2624.

Westies, Supplies Meet In City "A" Loop Playoff

City "A" league cage play will close today at 9 p. m. with the Mansfield Athletic Supply team and the Westinghouse club matched in playoff game. Both teams won one of the rounds during the regular season's ladder tournament and now will decide the year's champion.

The Supplies base their claim to the title on the scoring ability of Bruce McGinty who has led the loop in the number of buckets caged. Bob McCartey main hope of the Westies, has been called to the armed forces.

The top photo at the left shows the Westies while the bottom pictures the Athletics. Some changes in personnel have been made in the squads since these were snapped.

In a preliminary game starting in Mansfield Senior high school gym at 7 p. m. a picked team composed of members of other "A" leaguers will meet the Studebaker quintet of Willard.

Ohio State Loop Organizes But Braves Not Represented

The Ohio State baseball league organized for the 1942 season last night at Tiffin, but whether Mansfield is still a member of the league is a question even owners of the Mansfield Braves couldn't answer today.

* * *

The United Press said "representatives of Findlay, Fostoria, Fremont, Mansfield, Lima and Tiffin, declared their intention to enter clubs in the class D circuit for a schedule opening May 6 and closing Sept. 4."

* * *

Who represented Mansfield was a puzzle today to Dr. Frank Maxwell, one of the three owners of the Braves. Dr. Maxwell knows he didn't attend the meeting. George Satterlee, president of the Braves, has been out of town since last Thursday, and at his home it was stated definitely that he had no intention of attending the session. And the other owner, Bill Mead, also had no intention of going to Tiffin last night, according to Maxwell. Mead was in Ashland today and could not be reached.

Joe Donnelly was re-elected league president at the Tiffin meeting. Grover Hartley of Findlay was named vice president, and Marvin White of Fremont, secretary.

The league adopted the Shaughnessy post-season playoff system to replace the split season playoff plan in effect the past few weeks.

President Joe Donnelly, of Columbus, expects the age average of players in the loop to be reduced from last season's 20 years to around 18 because of the war's manpower demands but does not anticipate any difficulty in manning the six teams.

He said chances were "favorable" for each of the six clubs to start the season with Major league hookups as a source of player talent.

* * *

The league laid down no requirements on the playing of twilight or night games. The question of how many of each type should be played was left to the judgment of the individual clubs.

The directors will meet March 1 to approve a schedule.

McMullen-Warner Team Rolls Top

Mary McMullen and Pop Warner took top honors in the mixed doubles bowling league at Colony alleys last night with a 1035 total on the board, and 1095 including handicap.

Mary had high total for women of 527, and Frost led the men with 545.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT BOWEL WORMS
The signs are misleading.
Nobody is sure to escape.
Worms can make real trouble.
Anybody, anywhere, can "catch" roundworms! So watch out for these signs in your child or yourself: uneasy stomach, nose-picking, loss of weight, itchy seat, nervousness.
Get Jayne's Vermifuge if you even suspect roundworms. It expels stubborn worms, yet acts very gently. If there are no worms, it works just as a mild laxative. Thriller Taken By Battling Tyger Quint

Ashland Reserves Lose First Game of Season In Overtime

By REX HESS, News-Journal Sports Editor.

MANSFIELD'S TYGERS, big and little, treated high school cage fans to an evening of thrills last night at Senior high gym as they edged Ashland 35-33 in the last 20 seconds of the big game after the reserves had copped the preliminary 25-23 in an overtime period.

And the crowd was in an uproar all night long. It wasn't as big a crowd as it should have been for the thrillers put on display, but since Mansfield had defeated Ashland at Ashland, fans had no reason to suspect last night's game would be even close.

The Tygers were definitely cooled off from their heat wave of last Saturday night, and they had to battle all the way to turn in this win.

Now they face a tough weekend trip which takes them to Hamilton Friday night and Springfield Saturday.

Paced by Stentz's sensational set shots from the corner, Ashland wasn't a bit awed by the fast stepping Tygers, and the A's battled their way to a 9-8 lead in the first quarter.

But the Tygers came back for a 22-17 lead at the half, and were still ahead 32-26 at the third quarter. Then they didn't score again until there was only two minutes to go, and the A's were leading 33-32. Dean Hahn tied it up with a free shot.

And then, with 20 seconds of regular playing time remaining, Bob Winbigler hooped a one-hander from the circle, and it was all over.

Windy chalked up 16 points to bring his season's total to 203, but of all the buckets he's scored this year, none have been as important as that shot he plunked in the hoop in that last 20 seconds.

A minute and a half went by before Ken Krupp opened the scoring with a long shot. Schull tallied under the hoop for Ashland. Winbigler made the second of a pair of free tosses. Bartley scored under the basket and the A's were ahead 4-3.

Jacobs missed a free shot. Dietzel tied it up with a free shot, and Winbigler made a pair of free tosses. Jacobs missed another free shot. Stentz looped a long shot from the corner, Winbigler scored under the bucket and Stentz tallied once more from the corner. Winbigler missed a free toss and Semple made one giving Ashland a 9-8 lead at the quarter.

Stentz again scored from the corner and Bartley made the second of a pair of free shots to make it 12-8. Joe Altamonte caged a long shot from the side. Stentz got a follow shot and Bartley missed a free throw. Winbigler hooped a one-hander from the circle. Joe Romano missed a free toss. Bartley got a free point.

Paul Dietzel scored under the hoop and then missed a free throw. Stentz once more connected on a long shot from the side, making it Ashland 17, Mansfield 14.

Then the fireworks started. Winbigler got a pair of free points, and then added a bucket on a fast break. Krupp sank a long shot from the side and Dietzel scored on a pivot to make it 22-17. Dietzel missed a free shot before the half ended.

Jacobs got a free point. Dietzel made the first of a pair of free shots. Stentz fouled out and Winbigler made the second of two free tosses. Tucker, who replaced Stentz, missed two free tosses. Winbigler got a one-hander from the circle and Romano scored under the basket to make it 28-18.

Jacobs got a follow shot and then scored again under the hoop. Hahn got a sucker shot on some brilliant passwork under the basket. Schull scored from the circle. Hahn tallied under the bucket. Jacobs looped a shot from the corner as the quarter horn honked, making it 32-26.

Then Ashland got going. Bartley got a free point and then tallied on an under-bucket pivot. Dietzel fouled out and Bartley made a pair of free shots. It was 32-31 for Mansfield with five minutes and 30 seconds remaining.

Jacobs scored from the side to put Ashland ahead with two minutes and 45 seconds to go. Fifteen seconds later Schull fouled out and Hahn made the second of a pair of free throws to tie the score. With two minutes to go, Winbigler missed a pair of free chances. Then came Windy's game winning bucket.

Coach Vere Smith's reserves handed the Ashland reserves their first defeat of the season in the prelim. Mansfield got away to a 6-2 start in the first quarter and boosted it to 13-3 at the half. Ashland cut it to 20-13 at the third quarter, and then steadily came on to tie the score at 22-22 in regulation time. Flick Flockenzier's long shot won the game in overtime.

Mild Mannered Mel Expected To Carry On In Quiet Style

MELL OTT

By MORTIMER KREEGER—

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—Mel Ott learned his baseball under fiery John McGraw and hard-boiled, driving Bill Terry but the new manager of the New York Giants probably will continue to be the same mild-mannered Mel.

Ott won't say.

"I don't know just how I'll handle things," he explained. "I learned plenty from both McGraw and Terry. I have a few ideas of my own but I can't say what I'll do until I get the chance." That's typical of Mel, who never speaks about what he's going to do nor of what he has done.

It's unlikely, though, that a quiet chap like Mel will turn into a martinet overnight. He figures there are other ways to handle men and get the most out of them besides being tough and brusque. Mel hasn't been slow about telling umpires and players what he thinks about their decisions and actions, but he has done it in such a way that they haven't been "shown up" before the grandstand customers.

It's been 16 years since Ott, one of baseball's first "boy wonders," joined the Giants. Fact is, he was told to report a year before he did but he thought he was being kidded, and didn't.

* * *

Ott was a high school catcher and went with his battery mate when Pitcher Lester Rouprich signed with New Orleans in 1925. The late A. J. Heinemann, then New Orleans owner, decided Ott was too young. He arranged for Mel to play with a semi-pro team at Patterson, La., maintained by Harry P. Williams, millionaire industrialist and sportsman killed a few years ago in a plane crash.

In less than two weeks Heinemann had heard enough about Ott to offer him a contract but, says Ott, "Mr. Harry told me not to sign because he had other things in mind for me."

That summer Williams told his friend McGraw about Mel and the Giant's manager agreed to look him over. Williams sent Ott a postcard telling him to report but Mel explains that "I thought it was a joke and didn't go."

When Williams returned from Europe he sent Mel to McGraw with a letter of recommendation.

"Was I scared when I walked into McGraw's office!" says Mel. "I'd never been more than 100 miles from home, never outside Louisiana."

Mel recalled that McGraw looked puzzled when he identified himself as a "baseball player." Ott's explanation that "Mr. Williams talked to you about me" didn't help, either.

"Who's Mr. Williams?" demanded McGraw.

As Mel tried to explain, McGraw saw a letter in Ott's trembling hand and reached for it to read Williams' recommendation.

The 16-year-old Ott was given a three weeks' trial and then McGraw, satisfied that he was a prospect, sent him home with orders to report at training camp the next spring.

It wasn't long before McGraw was telling the sports writers about Ott's perfect batting style. McGraw paid Ott $500 for signing a contract and sent $1,000 to Williams, who promptly endorsed the check over to Ott.

Because Mel weighed only 160, McGraw decided to convert him into an outfielder and sent him out to compete with such veterans as "Irish" Meusel, "Pep" Young and Billy Southworth. When McGraw asked the 17-year-old Mel whether he'd ever played outfield Ott gave him a laugh by replying "Sure, when I was a kid."

Veterans in those days weren't anxious to help youngsters come along and take their jobs. Rookies usually went through plenty of hazing. But Mel was so modest and naive that the oldsters soon were giving him pointers and help.

Ott struck out his first two times at bat—as a pinch hitter. It wasn't until August that Ott was given a regular outfield spot—on August 21, in a shake-up. Ott went to the outfield and Bell Terry to first base.

The National league's home run ace—415 round-trippers—showed no early signs of being a slugger. It wasn't until 1928 that he hit a ball out of the park.

In 1929 Mel hit 42 homers and drove in 151 runs, his best record. The next year he had his highest batting average, .349, became old enough to sign his own contracts, and married Mildred Wattigny of New Orleans—who had been surprised to know anyone could make enough money playing baseball to live on. They have two daughters.

In that 1930 season Mel had one of his two greatest baseball thrills. He hit three homers and a double in one game. In the 1933 World series he hit homers his first and last trips to the plate, winning the game and the series with his last blow.

Ott well remembers McGraw's fiery methods. "He didn't mind errors. He knew they were all in the game. But he couldn't stand mental lapses. After a pitcher had hurled a no-hit game, McGraw, stingy with compliments, told him: "With me telling you what to pitch you ought to have some more like that.'"

Ott and Carl Hubbell, the only McGraw boys still active, are the darlings of the Polo grounds. Ott believes Hubbell will have a good year, but Mel won't say anything about his team's pennant chances. He has made several trades since he was named boss, getting Johnny Mize from the Cards, Bill Werber from the Reds and Hank Lieber from the Cubs.

BEAUFORD GLOVER LOSES AT TOLEDO

Beauford Glover, former Mansfielder, lost the decision in the 10-round semi-final bout at Toledo last night to Harvey Dubs, Canadian welterweight champion.

Lem Franklin, Cleveland heavyweight, knocked out Al Reiss of Detroit in two minutes and five seconds of the first round in the main bout.

Eyes College Heavy Crown

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Big "Peg" Kendrick, who has beaten two national collegiate boxing champions although the title itself has eluded him, is ready to make his hardest try at the crown this spring before accepting a commission in the Army reserve corps.

The Louisiana State University heavyweight will have the advantage of fighting in his home lot, for the tourney will be held here late in March.

Peg has lost only two of his 18 college fights. In 1940 Nick Lee of Wisconsin, over whom Kendrick had won a decision, beat him in the finals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association tourney. In 1941 Peg lost in the semi-finals to Gates Kinbrell of North Carolina, who was then beaten by Louie Campbell of Southwestern Louisiana. Peg had kayoed Campbell during the season.

His coach, Ed Khoury, former L. S. U. boxer and football captain, believes this is Peg's year. In fact, he thinks Peg could beat Joe Louis with a year of professional experience—or so he says in his more enthusiastic moments.

"All Peg has to learn to beat Louis," he declared, "is the fine points of infighting and how to gauge his speed over a 15-round route.

* * *

"He's as good now as Louis was when he was an amateur. Right now Peg could knock Buddy Baer out in two rounds. He's too fast for those big fellows. He's faster than Louis and can punch with any man."

Kendrick thinks otherwise.

"I'm not interested in a professional career," he says. "I'm not a professional fighter."

Peg, who now weighs 212, started boxing at 145 when at Homer, La., high school and had 38 bouts before graduating. He's won about half his 56 high school and college fights by knockouts.

An R. O. T. C. student, he'll become Second Lieutenant Herbert Kendrick in May and expects a call to active duty shortly thereafter.

PITCHER SIGNS

CINCINNATI—(INS)—Jim Turner, veteran pitcher from Nashville, Tenn., today signed his 1942 contract with the Cincinnati Reds.

CHAPTER XXXI

Linda laughed, unamused. "He's not afraid of me. Challenger and I understand each other. We're very much alike in many ways."

"If you mean each of you symbolize a certain type of beauty, I suppose that's true."

Linda, glancing stealthily at Steve's profile, saw he was grimly in earnest, although his eyes remained fixed on the road ahead.

"You're very gallant," she retorted, "but that's hardly what I had in mind. Challenger needs love, patience and a little understanding. He was wild and untrained, but now—"

"Then I fell down on my job." Steve's voice rose as they urged their horses into a canter. "Perhaps if I'd been more patient, more understanding, you would have learned to love me."

"What?" Linda could not believe her ears. Surely fate was playing another trick on her imagination. Unconsciously her heels dug into Challenger's sensative sides; her hands relaxed their grip on the reins.

"When you went back to Prairievale," Steve was saying stonily, "I thought you understood how I felt—that I loved you and wanted you to be my wife. I—I'd loved you for so long, but when I saw that it was Greg you really wanted—"

"But—Brenda—you were together so much—"

"Brenda!" Steve laughed bitterly. "Now that you're leaving, now that everything is settled between us, you might as well know there was nothing between Brenda and me. Oh! I'll admit she tried desperately to—well, rearrange my life. But I told her that everything was over for good. When she's had her little fling, I expect she'll be glad to come back to Jerry and remain faithful to him the rest of her life."

"I thought if you believed I was interested in Brenda, you'd feel free to make your own decisions, but stay with me because you believed it your duty, so I—" Suddenly Steve broke off, his face whitening. "Linda!" he shouted. "The jump!"

There was a blur of black gliding through the air as the horse took a sagging fence. Linda had taken that jump many times before, but now, oblivious of everything save Steve's agonized face and his low, bitter confession, she was off-guard.

As Challenger took the fence, Linda's slim body hurtled from the horse. There was another cry from Steve, a gasp from Linda as the strangely-still figure.

Up ahead, Greg was accusing Diane, his face sullen. "You planned this," he said wrathfully. "You knew Steve was out here and you threw Linda at him, trying to get them to patch things up. Why?"

Diane looked away. "I think everyone deserves one break," she insisted. "If I'm wrong about—things, I'll be the first to admit it, but I can't forget that Linda and Steve—"

Steve's cry reached them then, and Diane checked her horse instantly. "That was Steve," she said tensely. "Something—something has gone wrong back there!"

Without another word the couple wheeled their horses and galloped back to the jump, just as Steve, his face ashen, bent and carefully lifted Linda's crumpled, unconscious figure. He whispered, agonizedly, "Linda, my dearest darling, I've killed you!"

The nearest hospital was an hour's drive from Hillsacres, and while Greg piloted his car down the road like a veritable demon, Steven knelt in the back of the car over Linda's unconscious figure. Over and over again he reproached himself, Diane, who had no idea that Steve had confessed his love to Linda, said nothing to relieve his mental suffering.

Diane urged Greg to hurry faster and faster until the car approached the hospital, when she broke into sobs of relief.

"She'll be all right," Diane was saying as internes bore Linda away on a stretcher. "I know she'll be all right."

Waiting in the lounge for news, the trio was strangely quiet. Hunched in a chair, Steve stared at an unopened magazine. Greg paced back and forth across the room, smoking one cigaret after another. Diane tried unsuccessfully to keep from thinking of that brightly-lighted operating room where Linda was under observation.

At last a nurse appeared, and the three sprung up. Steve implored her for news. Diane held her breath.

"Mrs. Baridon is feeling much better now," the nurse said smiling. "It was a slight concussion, but she'll be all right after a day or two in bed."

"Thank God," Steve said, turning away to hide tears of relief that streamed down his face.

"Then—it isn't serious?" Diane wanted reassurance. Linda had been so still. So white—

"Absolutely not. She'll be just fine."

Another nurse appeared then, smiling first at Steve and then at Greg. "Mrs. Baridon is asking for her husband, please."

Steve started forward, dazed by this surprising information, unable to believe his own ears. "But—that's me," he said hesitantly. "She—she wouldn't want to see me."

"No, of course not," Greg blustered, but without conviction. "You must be mistaken. I'm the one she wants."

The pretty nurse was obviously confused. The idea of two handsome young men fighting for the attention of her patient was almost too much.

"Mrs. Baridon is asking for Mr. Baridon." She was slightly nettled. "If you're both named Baridon—"

Triumphantly, Diane shoved Steve toward the door. "Go on, you big goof," she ordered happily. "It's you Linda wants, and you're going if I have to drag you there."

After Steve had followed the nurse into the wide corridor, Diane turned to Greg. The meeting between Steve and Linda she had so carefully planned had been carried out, although it had nearly ended in disaster. Her work was done. Any tenderness her eyes might have contained as they rested on Steve was gone now.

"Well Greg," she said in a voice that was cool and cynical, "that's the last curtain. Shall we go?"

Dull-eyed he stared at her. "Then—Linda doesn't intend to—to marry me? It's Steve, after all?"

Diane felt a surge of pity for Greg. After all, it was hard for the man to realize he had been only a pawn in a game too big for him to understand. She knew with certainty that Greg had learned his lesson. Never again would he be the insolent, audacious playboy, but a sadder, wiser man.

"Yes," she answered, "it has always been Steve for Linda, but neither of them realized that until it was nearly too late." Shivering a little as she remembered how near Linda had come to never revealing the truth, Diane glanced up at Greg, admiring his courage despite the fact that his weak, handsome face was set in lines of suffering.

"Cheer up, Greg," she said "It's just like a story-book romance. Boy meets girl. Boy loses girl. Boy gets girl, and there are two people left on the outside looking in." She put her hand through his arm in a gesture of companionship. "Shall we go?"

Slowly, silently, they turned and walked down the wide stone steps from the hospital to face the bright autumn sunshine. Here, Diane knew, an understanding world awaited. Here, together, they would find solace.

Meanwhile, Steve followed the pretty nurse through the long hospital corridors, unaware of the comments of passing nurses as they stared after the handsome, sober-faced man in immaculate, well-fitting riding togs. Steve's thoughts were chaotic. Even now it was hard for him to understand that he, not Greg, had been summoned.

The nurse paused outside a closed door, suddenly aware that this was no ordinary meeting between husband and wife, but something too precious to be spoiled by the presence of a stranger.

"Mrs. Baridon is in this room," she said. "I'll wait out here."

For a moment Steve hesitated, his heart pounding. Then, resolutely, he opened the door and entered the room where Linda was waiting. For a moment she did not see him, and Steve felt a lump in his throat at sight of the tiny figure in the bed. There were bandages over her forehead and her eyes were closed.

Steven moved nearer, until he was standing at her side. Then Linda's eyes opened slowly—slowly until she saw him.

"Steve, dear," she whispered happily, her arms reaching up to him. With a sob Steve sank to his knees beside her. Tenderly, hungrily he pressed her against him.

"Oh, my dearest," he whispered brokenly, "I thought I had killed you."

"And would that have meant so much to you?" she asked, her eyes like stars, now that misunderstanding had been forgotten. She felt a swift thrill of happiness as his arms tightened around her.

"How can you ask me that when I love you so much?" he demanded huskily. "Linda—am I dreaming, or is this really you? I've wanted to hold you like this for so long."

"And I've wanted you, too," she answered. Gravely she told him the entire story, sparing no detail in her confession until she reached the point where she had returned from Prairievale to find Steve lunching with Brenda.

At that point she felt his arms tighten around her and she finished softly. "So I decided that I had been wrong—that I had misunderstood what you said when I went away. I—I didn't want you to feel you were tied to me, Steve. That was why I pretended I was dissatisfied when all the time—" She could not finish, but listened with glowing eyes while Steve explained.

"I told you the truth about being unable to meet your train," he said, "and I did meet Brenda although now I suspect she had a great deal to do with that. She asked me to take her to lunch, and naturally I had to agree. She—she told me a great many things about you that I never would have believed under ordinary circumstances, but when I came home and found you telephoning Greg, all the things she had said came back to me. I was half crazy with jealousy. From then on—"

"From then on, each of us misunderstood everything the other did," Linda murmured gently. "Oh, Steve, how foolish we've been. Think how much we've missed by our blindness!"

"We shared a great many things in the past," Steve whispered as he bent to kiss her soft lips. "Now we can begin to live for the future."

After a long time they drew apart, and Linda gazed shaken, into Steve's eyes.

For them it was a magic moment, when misunderstanding and doubt were cleared away by a simple caress. Linda made a gesture of helplessness. "I was thinking of Diane, Steve. She's done so much for us—bringing us together again. I want her to find happiness."

"I think she will, my darling," he assured her gently. "Diane pretends to be hard, but her heart is made of gold. She'll be all right."

Again they were silent.

"You'll be a very rich young lady, Mrs. Baridon," Steve whispered gravely, "and a very popular one now that our book is going to be a moving picture. Will a honeymoon in Hollywood answer the purpose?"

"Hollywood?" Linda was surprised. "Then, you aren't taking your horses south?"

Steve shook his head. "Of course not. Dad takes them every year. What made you think I was going? I'm to be a consultant on the new picture."

For Linda the last vestige of doubt had been swept away by that simple declaration. Brenda was forgotten now, a vague, shadowy figure of her past that could never touch Linda's newly-found happiness. Linda realized she had taken Brenda's planned trip to Saratoga as evidence that Steve would be there too.

Now she drew Steve's head down to the pillow beside her own.

"I'd love a honeymoon in Hollywood," she assured him, "but only on one condition."

"And that?" he urged.

"That after the picture is finished, we can go home—to Hillsacres."

Slowly Steve turned his head until his lips touched hers in a kiss that held a promise of the happy future they would share.

"Hillsacres it is, darling," he whispered. "Together."

Horn Will Blow If Any Part of Car Is Touched, He Claims.

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Ingenuity keeps pace. With tires irreplaceable and batteries, spark plugs, and accessories becoming more valuable, pilfering from parked automobiles has increased.

So Clarence E Ogden, Cincinnati inventor, has perfected an electrical device that will sound the horn for 15 seconds if anybody tampers with any part of a car

Ogden said the device could be adjusted to go off if a gust of high wind hit the car, but he recommended a less sensitive setting.

FAR EASTERN NEWS SHADOWS MARKET AGAIN

Lack of Stock Support Shows Importance of Singapore Vital Situation.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Bad news from Singapore again shadowed the stock market today and most departments extended their week-long decline.

Lack of support after the considerable decline testified to the vital influence of the Singapore situation in determining speculative operations. There were some favorable touches in the domestic business news but these were ignored.

Stocks inclined to sag further included Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, Kennecott, Allied Chemical and Chesapeake & Ohio. On somewhat better ground at times were Standard Oil (NJ), Chrysler and General Motors.

Attracting attention in Wall Street boardrooms was the Security & Exchange commission's monthly summary of transactions by officers, directors and principal stockholders of various corporations, which disclosed that sales predominated to a considerable extent, in December and, as is customary in the final month of the year, gift transactions were numerous.

TROOP MOVES HINT ATTACK

dent Roosevelt brought out by indirection yesterday the value of its contribution to the present grand strategy of the United Nations.

The prime objective of that strategy, Mr. Roosevelt explained to his press conference, was to prevent an enemy break-through on the world front, while inflicting the maximum punishment on the foe and his resources during the period the Allies are creating a superior military machine.

The Japanese, it was acknowledged, have broken through past the Philippines into the Indies, but MacArthur's resistance is still exacting a heavy toll from the enemy both in men and material.

The war department communique last night gave some indication of the greatly superior enemy forces which MacArthur has been keeping from other threaters of operations. On Batan, it reported, at least five enemy divisions have been identified as participating in the heavy fighting of recent days. The strength of a Japanese division is 25,000 men. That gives some idea of the tremendous pressure the enemy has been able to apply on the peninsula front, believed now to be no wider than 15 miles.

Besides the Japanese divisions identified in action, the war department said, another full division is guarding communications behind the front. Still another is divided between the occupation of Manila and the bombardment of the American forts which bar the entrance to Manila bay. In addition, there are large numbers of enemy support troops in the other section of Luzon island. And further reinforcements are constantly arriving.

The Japanese strategy apparently is to overwhelm MacArthur by sheer weight of numbers.

At the White House yesterday during the general war discussion President Roosevelt was asked whether he thought the attitude of the American people had been complacent in receiving the "bad news" on the conflict to date, and taking for granted ultimate victory.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that this may have been true to some extent, but he believed that the people now had a better understanding in every part of the country that, whether we liked it or not, this was a world-encircling war.
